Quebec Takes Over Olympic Village

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec government has taken over ownership of Montreal's Olympic Village, which will be home to 11,000 athletes during the Summer Games opening July 17.

Bringing down special legislation Tuesday in the Quebec national assembly, Finance Minister Raymond Garneau said the government had no other choice because negotiations broke down with Les Terrasses Zarolega Inc., builders of the 19-storey, twin-pyramid project.

Ownership passed immediately to the Olympic installations board, appointed by the government in November to take over responsibility from the City of Montreal for construction and financing of the 72,000-seat Olympic stadium and related facilities.

The new move means the Liberal government of Premier Robert Bourassa has taken under its wing all the major new construction at Olympic park and vicinity in east-end Montreal.

All predictions now point to a successful completion of facilities, but the deficit is estimated as high as $900 million.

While billed as a private-enterprise venture, the village was heavily financed by the Olympic organizing committee as costs rose to a government estimated $95 million from $33 million in December, 1974.

The committee—which will stage the Games after facilities are handed over by the installations board—shouldered an open-ended second mortgage on the village which officials said has climbed to about $65 million.

While the new bill requires three readings and royal assent before becoming law, observers said the Liberal majority in the national assembly assures passage. The takeover became effective as soon as the legislation was tabled Tuesday.

Mr. Garneau told reporters the immediate takeover was necessary to prevent Zarolega from undertaking further contractual obligations that might run counter to the objectives of the installations board.

But Andrew Gaty, one of four partners in the Zarolega consortium, called the legislation an "outrageous confiscation." He said in an interview he does not question the government's legal right to take over the project, but said the method deprived Zarolega of the court recourse normally open to companies and citizens.

Pierre Pinard, a specialist in expropriation law and adviser to Zarolega, said he knows of no precedent for the legislation.

The legislation makes no provision for ownership compensation. Mr. Pinard said. It provides that a three-member board—one member recommended by the installations board, one by Zarolega and a third by the first two—decide what management fees Zarolega should receive plus the consortium's original investment of $2 million.

Tough Budget For Ottawa

By PETER THOMSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said Tuesday his budget will be delivered sometime in the last two weeks of May, after Prime Minister Trudeau has met with provincial premiers to discuss oil prices.

Macdonald noted the prime minister has invited premiers to meet May 5 and 6.

His comment about the budget came after he was asked if it would take into account the new pricing arrangement for oil, which promises to be a bitter battle.

The price established last year, $8 a barrel plus transportation, was to apply only until June 30, 1976.

Four provinces disrupted the one-price policy by applying a freeze on prices of certain petroleum products last summer and fall. They were Nova Scotia, Ontario, Manitoba and British Columbia.

Several provinces have already indicated they will fight against any increase this year.

However, the federal long-term policy is for annual increases moving the Canadian price closer to the world price.

An increase in the Canadian price of about $1.50 a barrel is expected simply because the government cannot afford to maintain the subsidy on imported oil while the Canadian price is $5 below world prices.

Nova Scotia and P.E.I., which are totally dependent on oil fuel to generate electricity, have been particularly strident in fighting any increase.

Economists are already predicting that, in addition to the oil price-subsidy issue, it will be a difficult budget for Macdonald.

Bank of Canada Governor Gerald Bouey has warned about excessive government borrowing, stating that it might damage the economic recovery.

Macdonald must decide whether to reduce federal borrowing next year by budgeting for a smaller cash requirement, as most provinces have done in their 1976 budgets.

However, with the economy recovering slowly from its 1975 recession, the finance minister cannot expect increased tax revenues to cover much of the deficit.

There will be strong pressure to increase taxes to increase revenues, a move which could also be interpreted as slowing the economic recovery even more.

Government officials have also mentioned the possibility of some form of credit controls to reduce consumer borrowing and perhaps lead to a lowering of interest rates.

A MAJORITY OF ONE FOR STU LEGGATT

OTTAWA (FP) — The term a majority of one took on new meaning in the Commons early today.

As a marathon debate over riding boundary changes dragged on, New Westminster MP Stuart Leggatt looked around shortly after 2 a.m. and found that he was the only member in the House with the exception of Speaker James Jerome. He finished his speech, moved adjournment and carried.

Technically, a minimum of 20 MPs of the 265 are required to be in the House for it to continue sitting but the rules are frequently eased during overtime debates.

Peking Ousts Teng Again

Times News Services

PEKING — Chinese Communist Party vice-chairman Teng Hsaio-ping today was purged for the second time in 10 years.

His ouster from "all posts both inside and outside the party," announced by chairman Mao Tse-tung, was a direct result of riots earlier this week at the Tien An Men square and came three years to the day after his restoration to favor.

Teng, who has not been seen in public since January, had been under heavy attack from wall posters and party organizations for the past six weeks.

Teng, acting chief of the general staff of the Chinese armed forces, had been widely expected to succeed Chou En-lai when the premier died last January.

But Hua Kuo-feng, the nation's top policeman, was named acting premier in early February, and the new attacks on Teng began.

Hua was officially named premier today. He also was elected as a party vice-chairman, replacing Teng.

The action against Teng was swift, coming only two days after riots by elements believed to be supporting him.

However, the political bureau, now composed of only 21 members, is empowered to act on behalf of the central committee.

The swiftness of the action is regarded as an indication of the serious concern among Mao and the other leaders over Monday's riots.

During those riots, mobs set fire to at least three vehicles and a building in the square while protesting against the removal of wreaths paying tribute to Chou.

Some very basic issues are involved.

Many other high level leaders have been closely associated with some of the policies that Teng was accused of pushing at the expense of Mao's key policy line.

Primary Split

Times News Services

Jimmy Carter and Henry Jackson gained the victories, but in the end, the divided Democratic verdicts of the Wisconsin and New York presidential primary elections may prove a boon to the man who wasn't there — Hubert Humphrey.

President Ford won his sixth Republican primary, winning easily over challenger Ronald Reagan in Wisconsin.

There was no Republican primary as such in New York.

The drama was packed into the Wisconsin Democratic contest, a race that turned around early today and went to Carter as the final votes were counted, hours after Representative Morris Udall — favorite of the liberal wing of the party — staged a premature victory celebration.

George Wallace, who finished second in Wisconsin four years ago, came in a poor third.

Jackson's strong support from organized labor could do no better than bring him in fourth.

Udall also won a big bloc of New York delegates.

Both results point to another three-way race in the next big Democratic test, in Pennsylvania on April 27.

New Suits Won't Make Work—Job Finder

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm is trying to blame the unemployment situation on the unemployed, Victoria community action group representatives charged today.

New grooming regulations for employable welfare recipients are yet another indication of the new "get tough, hard-line approach that Vander Zalm is trying to push down everyone's throats," said Jamie Kelley, who works with the Community Action Group as a job-finder.

Kelley said it opens the door for discrimination against people with long hair, simply because their dress and grooming habits are different from the norm.

Kelley said the new regulations will "be used all the time" so people from the youthful sub-culture won't get welfare.

But he said two other regulations included in Vander Zalm's new policies are also dangerous.

A new regulation limits to two weeks the amount of social assistance for someone who quits or gets fired and is waiting up to nine weeks for unemployment insurance benefits.

Another regulation stipulates that hardship cases — those people who have been refused welfare — will no longer be eligible for assistance for shelter.

In one case, said, Kelley people will be locked into unacceptable jobs because they can't afford the waiting period for UIC and in the other case hardship cases will

Services For Hughes

HOUSTON (TNS) — Howard Hughes was buried beside his mother and father today in private sunrise services attended by 16 mourners.

"We brought nothing into this world. It is certain we can take nothing out," Dean Robert Gibson said.

The plot is located on a tree-shaded knoll flanked by a canebreak. Hughes' grave faces east and the sun was just rising and breaking through overcast skies as the services commenced.

Local Gov't Borrowing Soars to New Heights

OTTAWA (CP) — Total borrowing by government, companies excepting banks and other financial businesses, and by individuals rose by $1.75 billion during 1975 to $29.5 billion, the Bank of Canada's March review, released Tuesday, says.

The increase in borrowing over 1974 was due mostly to a surge in provincial and municipal government borrowing. Federal borrowing was about the same level as a year earlier while private companies borrowed less.

Bank of Canada governor Gerald Bouey already has warned in the central bank's 1975 annual report that excessive government borrowing might threaten a continuing economic recovery.

The March review points to a growing volume of government borrowing as a percentage of gross national expenditure — GNE — a measure of the value of all goods and services produced in the economy.

"Borrowing by all levels of government in total increased from just over $3 billion in 1973 to more than $8.5 billion in 1974 and to $12 billion in 1975, boosting the ratio of government borrowing to GNE from about three per cent in 1973 to just over eight per cent in 1975," the review notes.

The federal government's financing requirements for domestic transactions tripled from 1974 to $6 billion last year. About $500 million in Canadian dollars was received from foreign exchange transactions, leaving federal cash requirements at $5.5 billion.

The federal government's total debt grew by $4 billion, compared with $4.2 billion in 1974.

Provincial and municipal borrowing jumped to $8.1 billion in 1975 from $4.5 billion in 1974, the review says. This occurred because of continued rapid growth in their own enterprises and a substantial widening in the deficits of some provincial governments, the Bank of Canada says.

Most of the increase in municipal and provincial borrowing was in the form of long-term bonds, including about $3.5 billion of bond issues placed abroad.

Private borrowing decreased by about $1.5 billion from a year earlier to $17.5 billion last year. All of the decline was accounted for by reduced borrowing by businesses. Personal borrowing rose.

The lower borrowing by business reflected both a slower growth in plant and equipment investment and a drawing down of inventories.

Mortgage borrowing continued to be strong, and as housing starts picked up during 1975 residential mortgage loan approvals grew by 50 per cent over 1974.

$4,000 to Free Innocent Man

DELTA (CP) — A 58-year-old man being held in a Mexican jail because of a bank error over a cheque he had written says that he can buy his freedom for $4,000.

Victor Fisher, of this municipality, has been in jail in Manzanillo, Mexico, since Jan. 7 when authorities arrested him after a $500 cheque he wrote in Mexico was returned marked non-sufficient funds.

The cheque was written on a Royal Bank account but Mexican banking officials sent it by mistake to a branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, which sent the cheque back to Mexico.

After Fisher was arrested, his branch of the Royal Bank confirmed that the cheque was good, and the bank's statement was signed and notarized by Mexican authorities in Vancouver and sent to a court hearing the case.

Fisher was then cleared in Mexican courts of any wrongdoing in connection with the cheque, but a release order has been unexplainably held up.

Mrs. Fisher said Tuesday that she received word from her sister-in-law, Mrs. John Honeyman, who had spoken to an unidentified Mexican that, 'Vic wanted us to send someone down with $4,000."

"Vic figures the only way to get out of jail is to pay his way out," she added.

MP John Reynolds (PC—Burnaby-Richmond-Delta) asked External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen about Fisher's plight on Monday, and MacEachen replied in the Commons that there were "no abnormal delays" in the Mexican justice system.

Reynolds said in an interview from Ottawa that the Canadian government should publicize the fact that foreigners are not allowed bail even for relatively minor charges. "It's getting to be pretty treacherous to visit Mexico," he said. "The facts are that in this case it was a clerical error, and we've authenticated that."

Student March Protests Strike

NANAIMO—The civic shutdown continued here today and students from Malaspina College, were to stage a protest march through the city to push for a resumption of bargaining.

Striking members of the school board local of the Canadian Union of Public Employees continued their picket lines around all civic operations. All schools in the area were open for students to pick up and hand in assignments to teachers, but classes were cancelled.

CUPE members at Malaspina College are respecting the picket line and the faculty association has set up a communication centre outside the college grounds.

College student society president John De Boeck said the protest march, to start at noon today, is an effort to push both sides in the dispute, CUPE and the Mid-Island Public Employers' Association, back to the bargaining table.

"Students don't care who is right or wrong, but just want to see negotiations resume immediately," De Boeck said.

College students are concerned about missing exams which are to start in two weeks and in the vocational division several courses sponsored by Canada Manpower are threatened with closure if the strike continues for more than a week, he said.

Both sides in the dispute have said they are willing to resume collective bargaining, but no meetings have been set. Joe Kilner, chairman of the employers' association, said there is a possibility negotiations could resume by the end of the week, but a CUPE spokesman said the union has not been approached about any meetings.

The picket line around the Nanaimo regional district's recreation complex has cancelled a community musical play which was to open tonight, despite efforts to negotiate a compromise.

CUPE spokesman Joy Leach said Nanaimo's volunteer theatre group approached the union about the possibility of removing the picket lines so the play could go on.

The union told the regional district it would remove the line, if the district would not charge the theatre group for rental of the centre, she said.

The district has turned down the offer.

Leach said the rental charge for the centre is based on the labor costs of cleaning up "and we didn't want to open the door for non-union labor to do our jobs."

The theatre group is apparently trying to negotiate a similar compromise with other employers in the association.

Garbage has not been collected in the city since the strike began three days ago, and civic officials are still working on an alternate plan for garbage collection.

2 DROWN IN SEWAGE

FORT ST. JOHN (CP) — Two young brothers drowned Tuesday after breaking through ice that covered a sewage lagoon behind the trailer court where they lived.

An RCMP spokesman said Lynch Callison, 4, and his brother Dennis, 3, were able to gain access to the fenced area by climbing up a snow bank against the fence with a playmate.

The three-year-old companion returned to a baby-sitter with a boot missing and led the babysitter to the ice behind Shady Acres Trailer park at Charlie Lake, two miles northwest of here.

The RCMP spokesman said coroner Tom Mitchell will conduct an inquiry.

Cleaning Probe Rejected

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Public Works Minister C. M. Drury rejected Tuesday as "unwarranted" an opposition request for a full investigation into contracts awarded by his department for the cleaning of government buildings.

However, he told Loren Nystrom (NDP—Yorkton Melville) he would welcome any information of "undesirable practice" in this field from any member of the Commons.

The issue arose Monday when Nystrom revealed that the RCMP were investigating some of the cleaning contracts in Toronto and had "raided a federal public works office there last week in that connection."

Drury acknowledged another claim by Nystrom that a cleaning contract for a government building in Ottawa had been awarded to a company in which one of the participants was a federal civil servant.

Justice Minister Ron Basford said the investigation is continuing and the results will be referred to the "proper prosecuting authority" if there is evidence of criminality.

"If they involve violations of governmental regulations, they will be turned over to the department of public works," Basford added.

Outside the Commons, Drury said he was uncertain whether two cleaning contracts carried out by the Ottawa company owned by a former national defence department employee and his wife constituted conflict of interest.

The two contracts in question — held by George E. Brightman and his wife under the company name Alpha-Veeta Cleaning Services — were for the forestry laboratory on Montreal Road and the old Hull federal building.

Both started in 1972 and the last of the two contracts expired as recently as March 31. Brightman was laid off on Jan. 1 as a program analyst in national emergency planning when his job was declared redundant.

In an interview, Brightman said there was no conflict of interest in his case. He said he did his department job while his wife looked after the business.

He also said the works department was aware he was a government employee when it awarded his company the contracts.

New Suits Won't Help

The situation is simply this, said another job-finder, Howard Fairbairn. "There are 800,000 Canadians out of work; there are 45,000 jobs available this year . . and he's not going to put all those people to work even if he dresses them all up in new suits and gives them briefcases.

Kelley said more and more welfare recipients are being classified as employable, leaving a much larger group which could be cut off assistance at the whim of a social worker, who decides if the recipient is not making attempts to look suitable for employment.

But John Shields, president of the Victoria social services component of the B.C. Government Employees Union predicts social workers will rarely use the new grooming regulations.

"We have a whole range of people with different appearances and it has just never been a problem. I don't really see it becoming an issue."

Shields said if "someone is really so oddly dressed that the employment counsellor feels they couldn't be sent out looking for a job, we have in the past provided money for clothes and haircuts at the individual's request so that the would become job presentable."

But, Canada Manpower manager Stan Purdy said there have been incidents, for example, when a well-groomed woman will come in for a job, get sent on an interview and show up at the employer's office with a completely different attire—"her hair in curlers and dressed in blue-jeans."

Purdy said the regulations are designed for that "five or 10 per cent" misusing the system.

"I think it's been a long time coming," he said.

Provincial government counsellors dealt with between 700 and 800 employable welfare recipients last month; about 200 were sent out to job interviews, and about 100 obtained employment, he said.

"Vander Zalm said it well," said Purdy. "He put it succinctly. If a guy is going to work as a gardener, it doesn't matter what he wears, but if he intends to work as a butcher there are certain cleanliness standards that have to be met."

Sask. Prisoners Protesting

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. (CP) — A sit-in demonstration that began Sunday by 300 Saskatchewan penitentiary prisoners continued today as a three-man Canadian Penitentiary Service inquiry board investigated recent incidents at the prison.

Ken Williams, a spokesman for the penitentiary service, said the three officials will not meet with prisoners involved in the gymnasium demonstration. He said the prisoners have not been fed since Sunday but have access to water.

Prison officials have said no food will be given to the men until they return to their cells. The other 200 prisoners have been confined to their cells while the demonstration continues.

The prisoners began their demonstration during an afternoon exercise period to protest the death of Allan Moran, 18, of Regina, who died last Friday after choking on some food.

They claim inadequate medical treatment was provided for Moran, a charge denied by prison authorities.

Moran was one of three prisoners who died last week at the prison. The others apparently committed suicide.

The inquiry board will investigate the deaths and look into the sit-in.

City Will Collect Parking Tickets

As of July 2, all parking tickets will be paid at city hall — not the provincial court building on Fisgard.

And, city hall senior staff are already worried about the crush.

Council caucus was told Tuesday by comptroller Mason Sheldrick that some deployment of staff will be entailed, also extra cost.

"There can on a Monday be upward of 400 people coming in to pay fines," he said. "Cashiers will be busy all day, every day."

Mayor Mike Young told aldermen he feels the $5 fine for non-payment of a parking ticket within the statutory 72 hours should be increased, as a deterrent to irresponsible motorists.

"We have to step down on people who are flagrantly abusing the parking ticket system" he said.

NATO Easing Clamps On Portugal Papers

Times News Services

BONN — The NATO allies have quietly begun to restore Portugal's access to secret military documents as the threat of an extreme left-wing take-over there appears to have eased.

The North Atlantic alliance, however, is continuing to withhold information dealing specifically with atomic weapons and nuclear strategy, according to authoritative sources.

Though Portugal was one of the original 12 member nations when NATO was formed in 1949, the Lisbon government has in effect been shut off from virtually all of NATO's most sensitive military information since shortly after the April 1974 revolution in that country that carried with it the fear of a Communist-supported leftist takeover.

Within weeks of the civil strife, NATO had clamped security procedures on Portugal that gave it access only to unclassified documents or those labelled "confidential," the lowest form of NATO classification.

Early this year, however, after more moderate Portuguese leaders had successfully thwarted an attempted left-wing military coup last November and had moved toward restoring political leadership to civilian control, NATO removed some of those restrictions.

Sources say that the Portuguese now have access one important step higher, to material marked "NATO secret."

That access, however, reportedly is confined to Portugal's NATO ambassador, J. de Freitas-Cruz, who is charged with making sure the material only goes to certain NATO-approved ministries in Lisbon.

Lung Cancer Claims Senator O'Leary

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Grattan O'Leary, who went from the editorship of the Ottawa Journal to a seat in the Senate died today of lung cancer at his home here. He was 87.

John Diefenbaker, who as prime minister named O'Leary to the senate in 1962, described him as "an outstanding public figure for more than six decades, a journalist who made a great contribution to the press and an orator with few equals.

"I admire him for the most courageous way he faced his terminal illness," Diefenbaker said.

"He was the last of the old brigade that was here from the days of (Prime Minister Robert Borden," Diefenbaker said.

O'Leary ran as a Conservative candidate in the Quebec constituency of Gaspe in 1911, the year Borden formed his first government.

The year after he was elevated to the Senate, the Conservatives lost a federal election and the Liberals came to power under Lester Pearson.

But with Prime Minister Trudeua's triumph in 1974, Senator O'Leary said bitterly: "I'll never live to see another Conservative government now. I was hoping."

He was saluted during a Parliament Hill testimonial last year by Trudeau as a "very great partisan, a lovable partisan." O'Leary replied that partisanship aside, "far deeper is our common affection for a country called Canada."

While his journalistic abilities were to carry him to the heights, his start was secured as much by his staunch Conservatism.

He applied to the old Saint John, N.B., Standard for a job in 1909.

Although he had no experience, his political stance impressed the editor, who allowed him to try to dig up a story.

He returned from the harbor pilot's office with a long story on the increase in shipping in Saint John.

He jumped at a chance to move to Ottawa with The Journal to cover Parliament Hill.

His first task was to report on a complicated debate on grain-tariff changes and he mastered the difficult topic to the satisfaction of his editors.

He wrote a violent letter to The Journal on a matter of personal concern and instead of the expected dismissal, he was asked to become an editorial writer.

Reporting took him around the world covering such events as elections, the sinking of the Titanic in 1912, the 1921 disarmament conference in Washington in 1921, and the Second World War.

Doing the Hesitation Waltz

Such an upbeat press release from the Anti-Inflation Board! All full of exclamation marks! Frugally printed on both sides, it contained notes for a speech by AIB chairman Jean-Luc Pepin to the chamber of commerce in Levis, Que. last week, on the current state of the AIB's success rate.

Let us share with you some of the enthusiasm of the chairman of the "commission de luttle contre l'inflation," its much more graphic French title, which means the agency for the "contest, struggle, fight" against inflation, according to our Dictionnaire Canadienne.

According to the D'Artagnan of the inflation struggle, the battle is joined and the AIB already has the upper hand! He said "the system is under way" by which companies will report to the board on prices and profits.

But lest we think of the AIB as some all-seeing monitor, Pepin pointed out that "it is already clear that, as many people suspected, the indirect effects of the program will be the main effects, the direct highly visible cases of enforcement being only 'the tip of the iceberg!' In other words, the program will be mostly successful as a deterrent.

"Already, prices are being restrained, quietly."

So quietly, it seems, the AIB can't come up with very many examples. "Companies submitting reports that show profits beyond the guidelines are submitting plans to eliminate excess profits — usually they entail freezing prices until cost increases absorb the excess revenue.

"No company seems too eager to incur the publicity that would flow from a forced rollback by the board (though it might well become a publicity stunt at a later date!)" A knowing chuckle here, no doubt, as Pepin glanced out at his audience of businessmen.

But Pepin had five names to show that the AIB was having some effect on prices — the Banque Canadienne Nationale (safety deposit box charges), the Edmonton Journal (ad rates), the Toronto Star, Sheraton hotels and Stain Farm insurance (all price hikes) have rolled back planned increases "as a result of the anti-inflation program or after talks with board staff."

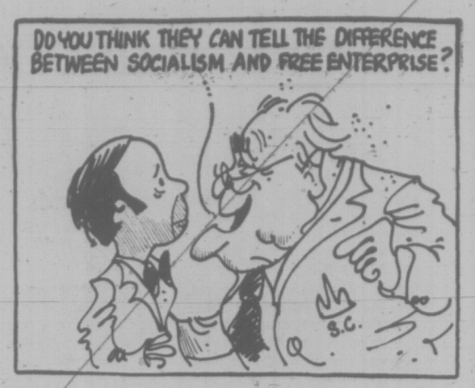
(A sixth came with a separate press release, evidence that the AIB sees everywhere. The board denied a request from the city of Windsor to increase the monthly per-bed administrative fees to $2.30 from $1.30 paid to physicians for patients in Huron Lodge, a home for the aged.)

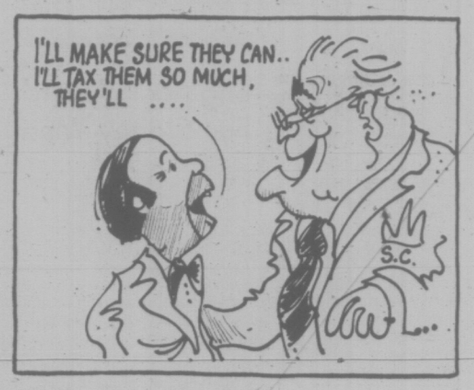
While hedging that it "is of course too early" to say what the definite results of the anti-inflation program have been, Pepin stated that available evidence indicated the rate of price increases is slowing down.

But the slowdown in price hikes, which show up in consumer price index figures for December, January and February, is attributable to the AIB in two ways, Pepin said. Some companies have postponed price rises because of the AIB proviso that it be notified in advance, and "the need to file base year and compliance forms have forced many firms to reassess their pricing intentions.

"The result has been a generalized price procrastination — what I have called the hesitation waltz! — by companies over the last four months."

This will pass, however, when companies learn the ropes and add in allowable price increases, so Canadian business won't be a wallflower for long. With the AIB making announcements mainly of wage increases being reduced ("shaved" is Pepin's charming term for it), the average Canadian understandably may have thought he was doing strictly a solo number. Can it be the chairman intends to force a few bashful partners into doing a turn around the floor?





No Kewpie Dolls

No kewpie dolls and a loud raspberry for the Pacific National Exhibition board of directors, which voted last week to raise the price of admission to the fair by 25 cents, even though the PNE made $1 million profit last year.

Besides being outside the anti-inflation guidelines, the 17 per cent hike to $1.75 means the price of admission for adults will be that much farther out of relation to what the fair is actually worth.

Let's face it, the PNE is essentially a small-town carnival expanded 10-fold with no comparable increase in quality. Forty years ago, you would have found the same carny pitchmen, the same tired sideshows, gambling booths and fried food stands.

PNE president Ed Sweeney says the increased revenue from higher admission prices is needed to provide improved facilities and better shows. But what has the PNE done with the healthy profits earned in other years?

While Ontario has built a glittering pleasure place on the shores of Lake Ontario for its citizens, while Montreal has its continuing — and still exciting — Man and His World in the middle of the St. Lawrence river, while Tivoli gardens have existed in the centre of Copenhagen for a century B.C. is saddled with a corny agricultural fair stuck in the 1890s.

Nobody would even object to paying $2 or even $3 to experience something different, with flair and imagination, well-designed and executed. Look at Disneyland's immense success. If it's stimulating, exciting, a pleasure to be in, then people will pay any admission price.

Unfortunately none of these descriptive adjectives can be applied to the PNE of the 1970s.

RICHARD GWYN

His Job: Mission Impossible

Mr. Richard O'Hagan,
Special Advisor
Communications,
Office of the Prime Minister,
House of Commons,
Ottawa.

Dear Dick:

This is the first open letter I've written to anyone since starting this column a couple of years ago. I do so only because I knew you well in the 1960s when you were press secretary to the late Prime Minister Lester Pearson.

Welcome back. Government then seemed brighter, fresher, more hopeful, than it does today. Perhaps the only difference is that we both were younger.

You'll notice, I hope, a protective attitude toward you contained in that paragraph. As a spokesman for the prime minister, you'll need the press. Not since the closing, sturm und drang, years of former prime minister John Diefenbaker have relations between prime minister and press been worse.

Bad Press

Trudeau is in political trouble, much of it, in Pearsonian style, self-inflicted — the affair of the judges, the bungled Lockheed aircraft contract, the Sky Shops affair, his loose philosophizing about a "new society." He's in a mood to shove the messengers, or at any rate to give them 25-year jail terms.

Trudeau expressed his feelings about the press at a recent Liberal caucus. He said the quote may not be exact; my sources disagreed on the wording: "To the extent that we can get something through their (reporters') heads, they are useful. But it's difficult. They are so thick."

We in turn are in a chippy, belligerent mood. One cause is that our egos inflated at all times are bruised by Trudeau's indifference to the press. Another is that we are ashamed at the ease with which he manipulated us during the 1974 election when he campaigned vigorously against wage and price controls and then, under political pressure, imposed them, we've doubted his intellectual integrity.

Nevertheless, though intensely reluctant to admit it, the press needs you. For the last six months, for the first time in probably two decades, no one from Trudeau's press office has attended the daily briefings given the prime minister by his two chief aides, Principal Secretary Jim Coutts and Clerk of the Privy Council Michael Pitfield. We reporters have been reduced to talking to each other.

Trudeau can worry about his political problems, and the press about its professional ones. The loser in this squabble is the public.

The consequence has been closed government on a scale unequalled since Mackenzie King talked only to his crystal ball. You predecessor, Pierre O'Neil, tried to promote a policy of open information. He got stomped on by Pitfield who believes, as did Metternich, that successful government by the few depends upon the ignorance of the many.

Trudeau, it scarcely needs to be said, has the same attitude. So does Coutts, which is worrisome because he and Pitfield, the people closest to Trudeau, both are giving him advice he wants to hear. Party strategist Senator Keith Davey is more of an information "dove." He has influence, but much less frequent access to Trudeau.

You thus become, whether you like it or not, standard-bearer for the cause of freedom of information. Your assignment, no doubt, is to make the government look good. Your challenge is to make the government good by using your position on the inside to kick open the doors so that the public can learn what is going on.

The argument for freedom of information derives from the presumption that information about the public, which is collected by government, belongs to the public and not to the government. O'Neil, and others on the inside, have used that argument. It has gotten them precisely nowhere, or, in O'Neil's case, to Senegal where he now teaches journalism.

To avoid being shipped back to Washington, I would suggest you anchor your case on political advantage. The Conservatives, led by veteran MP Jed Baldwin, are espousing a Freedom of Information Act. In the tradition of controls, and of indexing of income taxes, the Liberals should steal their opponents' policies.

Heavy Trip

Secondly, the press won't shut up about this issue. A policy of open information won't silence us, but it may mute snarls to mutters.

All of this is a heavy trip to lay on you in your first week in office. Yet, implicitly, it's flattering. We take for granted that you'll be good at your job. We expect you to broaden it, from holding hands between prime minister and press to holding them between government and public.

Lastly, make sure you get invited not only to the daily briefings but also to the late-night sessions at 24 Sussex Drive where Trudeau debates the unfolding of the future with Pitfield, Coutts, international affairs aide Ivan Head and urban affairs deputy minister Bill Teron.

Inflation Victims

The article by Dr. Michael Bradfield of Dalhousie University, labor was the victim of inflation" exploded yet another myth which is generally accepted by the ill-informed public. I would add that Dr. Bradfield did not expound his personal opinion but based his article on hard facts procured from the Economic Review Department of Finance 1975.

Another myth that all people on welfare and unemployment are worthless and a burden to their fellow citizens was also exploded on CBC radio program "Update" on Saturday. Incidentally this program also gave facts and not just opinions. of course there are some who cheat but they are certainly not alone.

When one hears of John Turner — the late minister of finance — entering a law firm at a salary of some $200,000 per annum although, as he stated his law is a little rusty and since that date he has been made a director of Canadian Pacific and his name is bandied around as a possible top executive of MacMillan Bloedel. Those who have and especially if they have been politicians are certainly looked after by the "Canadian Establishment." I am not opposed to suitable recompense for those who are talented and succeed but it irks me to listen to the continuous bombardment from the news media against the less fortunate members of our society and who are of course, the vast majority. When we have unemployment of around nine per cent in B.C. it is surely hypocrisy to throw stones at those on unemployment and welfare.—M. P. B. Wrixon, 1701 Cedar Hill Crossroads

Slanging Matches

The serious work of getting the province straightened out has been delayed because someone said someone told someone the sales tax was going up to 7 per cent.

So what? Half the province was saying the sales tax would go up and many of us guessed 7 per cent.

Big deal. Get on with your work, gentlemen — and ladies — and don't get tangled up in any more slanging matches. We've had it up to here with political hassles both here in Victoria and in Ottawa.

So, get with it. Now.—A. F. Davies, 4611 Vantreight Drive.

Retrograde Step

It is unfortunate that in its effort to cut expenditures, the government eliminated the Company of Young Canadians, the Opportunities for Youth, reduced L.I.P. programs and froze family allowances at their present levels. Since the amount of money involved, in comparison with the total federal budget, is trifling, I cannot help wondering why government took this retrograde step.

As a social worker and citizen interested in community involvement, I have seen many excellent and worth-while services performed by persons funded through the above projects. In this time of growing unemployment and growing despair, I urge the government to reinstate these programs. Nay, not only to reinstate but to increase the amount of money available by at least 20 per cent more than the 1975 budgets. It is ironic indeed that it was just these innovative programs that other developed countries are studying with a view to seeing if they can be adapted to their unemployment situation, that were chosen to be either eliminated or reduced.

It is also a matter of concern to me that family allowances have been frozen and not allowed to rise with the cost of living.

I share your concern for the need to slow down the rate of inflation but it would be regrettable indeed if the impression got abroad that the poor are chosen to bear the major consequences of the government anti-inflation program."

I conclude this letter by asking what the government anticipated saving by these cuts and though I wrote to them on March 16, 1976, I have not yet been favored with a reply — Bernice Levitz Packford, 152 Cambridge, Victoria.

Unrelated

It is a pity that Dr. Michael Bradfield did not receive a better education in elementary mathematics before he became a professor of economics. While it is possible that his conclusion may be true, that "labor was the victim of inflation" his argument in the Victoria Times article April 2, 1976, are completely fatuous and show basic ignorance of mathematics.

He mentions no dollar figures but infers dollar conclusions from percentages. Does he get paid in dollars or a percentage of his department's grant? He ought to know that percentages can only be valid for comparison of identical items and condition.

For example, if the price of an apple goes up from 10c to 20c the rise is 100 per cent. If the price then goes down to the original 10c the fall is only 50 per cent. Another example: if a 10-oz. bottle of a beverage contains 10 per cent alcohol; and this is increased to 11 per cent, the amount of alcohol is raised 10 per cent but to keep it to a 10-oz. bottle, the amount of water (etc.) has only to be reduced by a little over one per cent.

Dr. Bradfield, if you want to give some real information use dollar totals not meaningless unrelated percentages. —Walter White, 1936 Bowker Place.

Incredible

Having been out of the province for some time I am now catching up on the political picture and am nauseated at the incredible mud slinging in which the NDP party, led by David Barrett, and their supporters are indulging. The drastic budget for 1976 would never have been necessary had it not been for the financial chaos incurred by the NDP government. One has only to study the statements prepared by the firm of chartered accountants who made a quite unbiased audit of government funds following the election. The figures therein speak for themselves and could not have been published were they not facts. The NDP are quite unscrupulous in their charges, in their endeavors to ingratiate themselves for the next election, while the Social Credit government are risking their popularity in an endeavour to bring the province out of the mess left the preceding government.

Any honest person I am sure will agree, so quit criticizing the Social Credit government and lay the blame where it rightfully belongs on the shoulders of the NDP who spent the taxpayers' money like drunken sailors, as though there were no tomorrow. Now we are paying for the wild spree of three years past. This cannot be done in weeks or months, but could take three years as it did the NDP government to dissipate the millions of dollars losses. So be fair.—D.M.C., Victoria.

Sex Education

With all the current controversy about sex education appearing in the newspapers almost daily I feel it is about time I expressed an opinion.

I was a masochist and an exhibitionist throughout my teens and into my late 20's. As far as my parents were concerned sex was something I would have to find out about for myself. Ignorance of my own sexuality drove me to alleviate my need for sexual gratification through bizarre and increasingly painful means.

I am not ashamed of any of the acts I committed in the past. This letter isn't to purge myself of any guilt that I may feel. It is an attempt to get through to those parents who feel that sex education is best kept in the home and out of the classroom.

For every twenty or thirty children who learn about sex from their parents in frank and open discussions there are inevitably one or two children who grow up with distorted ideas about an extremely important facet of their lives.

I am not asking for sympathy for myself. The sympathy should be saved for that teen-ager who, from want of proper knowledge about a wholly natural instinct, achieves sexual satisfaction through self-injury. Involved.

Melted Cone

According to Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm, as much as $80 million in welfare frauds are perpetrated annually. This does not mean people in genuine need, but people collecting two, three and up to five cheques, those collecting welfare while holding down one or two full time jobs, etc., etc.

Most people know of such cases in their neighborhood but are afraid or unwilling to become involved in helping right the situation.

Our three years of socialism was a little like an indulgent parent giving his children a nice big ice cream cone. Soon the child came to expect the ice cream cone on a regular basis, then to demand some decoration like nuts and cherries. Then the kids got together as a "union" and wrote out a contract listing their "rights" and "demands" for a bigger ice cream cone twice a day.

Today, the children are howling with rage that they should be asked to pay for the ice cream that's been eaten! — R. H. Young, 2965 Sooke Road.

Kaleidoscope

Having recently arrived in Victoria from Toronto, I was very pleased to be able to find two such entertaining children's plays and both by the same company — Kaleidoscope Theatre. One was The Rutabaga Country and the other was The Alihiparhinacrocadiligator.

Both plays were innovative and original and a delight for children and adults, with catchy tunes and lively dance steps. The 4½-year-old I took was jumping with excitement especially over the pigs with bibs.

After watching Toronto's children's theatre, where the actors can't even seem to hide their boredom, it was a pleasure to see energy and enthusiasm in what should be an exciting medium but all too often isn't.

Victoria is very fortunate to have Kaleidoscope doing such professional children's theatre.—Marty Crowder, 1010 Balmoral Road.

Wires Crossed

Re Mr. Peter Dunnet's letter of March 31, Taxation Inequalities:

He has his wires crossed altogether. A lot of pensioners, like myself, only get $270 pension a month, and out of that I pay $74 rent a month and buy $100 worth of groceries and pay at least $50 monthly for clothing. So where is the money to pay for the taxes you speak about (the $400)?

You're just a snotty nosed kid who begrudges the pensioner a little joy out of life after bringing the likes of you into the world.

Have you no heart for the old age pensioner? What are they supposed to do, starve and go in rags?

If you weren't such a know-nothing hippie you would have more respect for your elders. It was a future old age pensioner that brought you into the world (your mother and father) if they lived that long (God bless them). — Max R. Anderson, 1066-875 North Park Street.

Some of Blood on Boardroom Floor is ours

By ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM
The Sun

OTTAWA — The most powerful man in the most powerful company in Canada that controls the most powerful firm in the most powerful industry in British Columbia stood his ground in his Chateau Laurier suite at midnight last night and said, a baby-innocent smile on his face: "Nothing to do with me."

Behind his back in the CPR empire, factotums call Ian Sinclair Big Julie. It's adapted from a mock-Mafia figure in an old Wayne and Shuster epic. Although somewhat short of six feet, he projects a hulking image — partly because a startling amount of his weight is concentrated in his upper body. He's Garrett Hunsperger in pin-stripes. Mostly though, it's because of the projectile missile known as his personality. The hulking personality fills the room and he says behind eyes that in Peter Newman's words have "the opaque quality of peeled grapes"—"nothing to do with me. I was in Mexico last Friday."

He's talking, of course, about the blood on the board room floor, the now celebrated decapitation of Denis Timmis and George Currie, the welfare recipients of the MacMillan Bloedel pension fund. The chairman and chief executive of Canadian Pacific Ltd. — who can take over any time he wants the No. 1 forest company in Canada, the key to 50 cents in every B.C. dollar — says he had nothing to do with the Friday afternoon massacre. Would he kid a naive reporter at midnight? Is the Pope Catholic?

Ernie Richardson, who seems to protesteth too much, says defensively "Jack Clyne is not running this company." Ho, Ho, Ho. John Valentine Clyne could eat Ernie Richardson for breakfast and have room let over for half the linemen in B.C. Tel.

What is most surprising in all this, among those who prize the bottom line, is the pretence that MacMillan Bloedel is not a corporate body in torment. Was public relations czar Peter Downes giggling behind his hand when he said: "I think if you will look at the statistics you will find that it is not a cheap executive's graveyard"?

Well, as we say, let me say this about that — remembering, of course, that the latest titillating corporate coup came while H. R. MacMillan was barely cold in his grave.

1960: J. V. Clyne becomes chairman, Harold Foley from Powell River vice-chairman, culminating in the Shaughnessy scandal when J. V. dumped his glass of rye over the head of the elegant Foley, one of the world's gentlemen.

1968: Specht "resigns." The poor English language suffers once again.

1971: There ain't no president at all until Robert Bonner is appointed, having been airlifted in from the unwelcome arms of W.A.C.

1974: Bonner "resigns" as chairman. Currie becomes chairman.

March, 1976: Currie and Timmis "resign" and Ernie Richardson becomes chairman, acting president, sweeper-up and parking lot attendant.

Now all this would be hilarious beer parlor gossip on a Friday afternoon payday except for the fact that the pocketbook of me and thee is involved. What's good for MacBlo is good for B.C. The payouts — because of mismanagement, towering personality conflicts or whatever — are staggering. There is one story that the payouts to one of the executives will reach $1 million over his lifetime.

You will note, of course, the sanctimonious Socred-B.C. Hydro sermon (in the wake of the Cass-Beggs $10,000 pension) that there was no pension agreement when Bonner became chairman. Well — as we now know, thanks to the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington while Canadian law deprives us of the same information — Bonner is entitled to a $62,500 pension from M and B, which is more than he makes as Hydro chairman.

It's not as if exactly everything came as a surprise to those in charge. At the annual watering hole gathering of the forest clan at the Timber Club extravaganza in mid-February, when Denis Timmis did not appear and instead took the occasion to honeymoon in Hawaii, the eyebrows went up and then came down on the inevitable conclusion. (When the corporate heads were lopped last month, Currie was enraged and indulged in much red-faced door-banging around the M and B tower; the cool Timmis, who is almost too civilized to be such a high personage, was hurt but philosophical and went around calmly shaking hands and saying goodbye).

He and the new bride are in the process of redoing their big, handsome white house on the fringe of the old Shaughnessy golf course and are setting out on a meditative drive to California. He's making noises about staying in Vancouver. (So would I — he's in his early 50s, I'm 27 — at a pension of $87,500 plus.)

No, says Ian Sinclair, the most frankly honest businessman in this realm, there is nothing to the rumors about hiring John Turner for the job. He (I mean, uh, they) are really looking. He says, rather defensively, "Do you want me to move out there to take it?"

It would be quite funny if one had a macabre sense of black humor, because, at the moment, Timmis and Currie are lopped because of the $26 million losses in the shipping end that led to the first deficit in M and B history, a clutch of the shipping executives are up to their hips in lawsuits in Vancouver courts over their dismissals. The first court case will open momentarily.

Mr. Sinclair, quite truthfully, says "When there are losses, someone has to go." True. But for the fill-in spokesmen at the Vancouver end to pretend that this is a well-run company — as witness the record — is rather, uh, mirth-provoking.

Turner's Stale Answers

TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

John Turner's speech to the Ontario Economic Council last month, some six months after he resigned without explanation as minister of finance, marks his return to national policital debate and probably the still-distant leadership race of the federal Liberals.

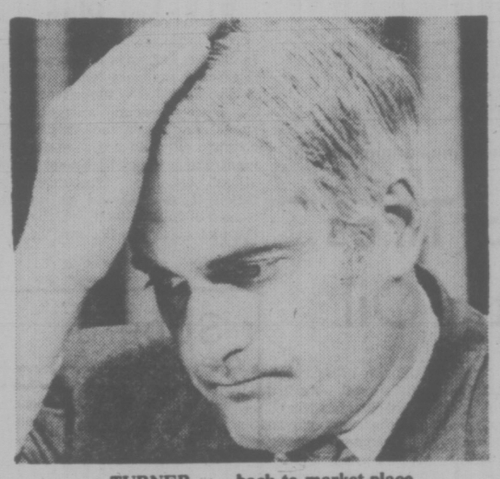
While Turner had few new ideas to offer he did say things that the growing number of disaffected Liberals and members of the business community who have been traditonal Liberal party supporters wanted to hear.

Which is to say that he offered a conventional view of the economy, staking out a position that put some political distance between himself and Prime Minister Trudeau but leaving himself in a position that could appeal to businessmen and middle-of-the-road Canadians should be become a successor or alternative to Trudeau.

In his speech Turner castigated the federal government's failure to control its spending, urged an early end to wage and price controls, complained that unemployment insurance and other benefits may be undermining the work ethic and called for less government interference so that market forces have a better chance to work.

Underlying his speech was a basic message: Canadians don't need the new society that Trudeau has suggested they do.

"There is a temptation to argue that the so-called market system is no longer working as it should; that we should look for alternatives," Turner said in a reference to Trudeau's recent comments. But, in his view, "the system is fundamentally workable and sound."



TURNER . . . back to market-place

No doubt the system can be brought back into balance, at least for short periods of time, if the public is given shock treatment, such as wage and price controls. Once controls are lifted the restraint psychology will likely linger a little longer. But after that the country is likely to return to its pattern of recurring inflation and unemployment, as Trudeau has suggested.

This is why Trudeau has said the market system isn't working any longer and may need to be replaced by some kind of new society. The country has lost its traditional consensus on how national wealth should be divided. The power of strong groups, such as major corporations and large unions, has enabled them to stay ahead, but at the expense of the rest of the community.

Hence wage and price controls. The real importance of controls is that they provide immediate shock treatment for the economy while giving much-needed time to arrive at a new consensus on how the system should work once controls are lifted.

If the country, and the Liberal party, are looking for someone with new ideas to reach a national consensus — and if this is to continue to be the role of the Liberal party — then based on what Turner had to say, he may not be the man.

While he had some worthwhile things to say, Turner seemed more interested in restoring the economic system to its traditional pattern instead of suggesting new goals and directions.

This wasn't good enough for Canadians who found that the old ways led to inflation and recession. Trudeau finally realized this, switched his ground and brought in controls and began to seek new solutions. Canadians aren't likely to be interested in going backwards. That's something for Turner — posed on the fringe of national politics — to consider.

Do We Really Need Him?

THE SUN
An Editorial

Just how elusive a commodity political principle is in the politics of British Columbia is being amply demonstrated by the Social Credit government.

With the echoes still sounding of their shrieks of unctuous horror at all the political pals the former New Democratic Party government hired to run the province's affairs, the Socreds have set out to do the same thing.

Robert Bonner, attorney-general in the Social Credit administration of W. A. C. Bennett, is given the $48,000-a-year post as chairman of B.C. Hydro and Power Authority. Now coy hints from Economic Development Minister Donald Phillips that the presidency of B.C. Railway will go to Ray Williston, former Social Credit resources minister.

This is not right — and in saying this we do not decry whatever talents or energies the two men might have.

Appearances are important. One of the new premier's stated objectives is that the province's Crown corporations should be separated out — as they have not been in the past — from the province's politics.

Will the public believe this to be happening if it sees the government appointing people to head these corporations who are clearly the government's political friends?

The rumored appointment of Mr. Williston, in particular, disturbs us.

Throughout his 18 years in the cabinet, Mr. Williston worked hard. But he was also a fiercely partisan minister, ever-available to defend his master's policies.

He became increasingly identified with the resources interests (his picture with a warm message once appeared in a McMillan-Bloedel brochure sent to shareholders).

He championed mining and logging in provincial parks, stalled tough pollution control measures and was the minister responsible for the Cypress Bowl fiasco.

As The Sun said editorially in 1969: "The legacy of almost two decades of Mr. Williston's brand of government is drowned forests, polluted lakes, filthy beaches, rivers which are open sewers, flash floods, denuded hillsides, despoliation wherever one turns."

Is this the best man to run the people's railway — a railway in financial difficulty, that has been wrongly used as a political instrument by both the NDP and Social Credit to bash away at each other? Is a partisan political appointee really the man for what should be a non-partisan job?

These Are Taxing Times

russell baker

On this particular day I rose and found there was no shaving soap, so I went around the corner and bought some, and the city and the state taxed me 8 per cent. This is the beard tax.

Later — had a haircut and the city taxed it. They had taxed my head and they had taxed my jaw, so I said "Why not let them tax my stomach?" and went out to lunch, where they taxed my meal.

After having my stomach taxed, I bought two pair of socks, which they also taxed. The day wasn't half over and I had already been taxed from head to toe.

I knew I ought to be a good citizen and let them tax my teeth, so I bought some toothpaste and a brush which they taxed, and went back to the office washroom and did my civic duty along the gumline.

Afterwords I did some work for the boss, and the federal government, the state and the city all taxed my pay.

I went home and they taxed my house.

The car was in the shop for repairs, so I telephoned to see if they had finished not getting it repaired correctly, and they taxed my phone call.

Then I went to pick up the car and pay for the work, and they taxed the repair, which hadn't been done correctly. This gave me a headache so I went to a drugstore and they taxed my aspirin. This is the headache tax, which is not to be confused with the hair tax collected at the barber shop, or the dandruff tax, which is collected at the shop that sells dandruff-remover shampoo which doesn't remove the dandruff.

Having had my jaw, hair, stomach, feet, teeth, salary, voice, headache, house and incompetant car repair taxed, I decided to forgo the dandruff tax for the time being, which must have sent shocks of despair through thousands of politicians all the way from Albany to Washington.

To raise their spirits, I drove to a filling station and said "fill her up," and they taxed my gasoline.

Afterwords I parked the car in the garage, and they taxed my parking space.

When I arrived home the new chair we had bought had just been delivered. "Is there a sales tax?" I inquired "Eight per cent" said the in-house accountant.

So I sat down, and they taxed my seat.

Picked up a book, and they taxed my mind.

Turned up the thermostat, and they taxed my heat.

Asked the cook if they'd taxed my meat, but she said no, they didn't tax the meat unless you went to a restaurant to eat, which struck me as extremely decent of them, especially when we consider how much we expect of them. Keeping Kissinger airborne, licensing dogs, keeping our youth off the streets five hours a day, and so on.

I wanted to do something high-mindely civic, and since it was getting quite dark, the task was easy. I could either sit there in my taxed seat and suffer dangerous eye strain by reading my taxed book, or I could turn on the electric lamp and save my vision.

I turned on the lamp and they taxed my light.

I was profoundly moved by the thought of the vast sums of government revenue I was generating simply by sitting there with my eyes skimming the leisurely sentences of Henry James. Although scarcely moving a muscle, I was churning out vast sums of governmental wherewithal.

Governments were taxing my eyes, taxing my mind, taxing my seat, taxing my heat, taxing my headache and taxing the very house in which I was providing these lucrative services to government. And all the time, completely forgotton, my faithful car was sitting silently in its garage churning out new parking taxes for me to pay.

I felt so good about that I rose and mixed a drink, and they taxed my gin.

And all the time the miracle of human biology was working away to insure that my usefulness would resume on the morrow.

Whiskers were silently growing to assure fresh payment of the beard tax next morning. Hair was toiling up out of the follicles to guarantee another barber tax payment two weeks hence. Socks were slowly eroding to insure a constant outflux of foot-taxed payments.

The thought of it made me take three more gins quickly, and politicians smiled from coast to coast, knowing that in the morning they would rake in a surplus from the headache tax.

The Newmont annual report outlined the results for Similkameen Mining Company Limited (100 per cent owned), Granduc Operating Co. (100 per cent owned) and Bethlehem Copper Corporation (23.1 per cent owned).

All figures were given in United States dollars.

Similkameen lost $4.5 million in 1975 compared with $4.4 million in profits in 1974, with 1975 sales down to $21.8 million from $41.5 million 1974.

At year-end, the mine had an estimated 58.2 million tons of copper ore at an average grade of .53 per cent. During 1975 four million tons of ore were milled.

The report said the mine's concentrator has been expanded to 22,000 tons a day capacity from 15,000 tons a day — at a cost of $6 million.

Newmont reported it received no dividend return from the mine in 1975.

The Granduc Operating Company, which holds 50 per cent of the lease on the Granduc mine also made no return to Newmont in 1975.

The mine now has been cut back to 3,400 tons a day from 4,500 tons a day as previously reported. This was the second cutback; the first was from over 8,000 tons a day.

Newmont said the mine ore reserves now are 19.6 million tons with an average grade of 1.69 per cent copper.

Newmont pointed out most of Bethlehem's income was in interest payments on cash reserves of $50 million.

As previously reported Bethlehem's net profits for 1975 were $1 million, compared with $11.3 million in 1974.

Cyprus Anvil

Cyprus Anvil Mining Corporation predicts its profits will drop in 1976, but will pick up again in 1977.

The company annual report said metal markets for its main products, lead and zinc, are not expected to improve until the end of 1976.

As previously reported net profits for 1975 were $20.5 million or $2.70 a share.

In anticipation of better markets in 1977 the company said it is "planning for substantial expenditures for the new mine equipment required to maintain the present level of production."

As previously reported the company has agreed to defer 20 per cent of its zinc and 8.6 per cent of its lead shipments to Japan from the company's mine near Faro, Yukon, until 1977.

Aside from this, the report said the company expects to sell all its production in 1976.

EARNINGS

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Baton Broadcasting Inc., six months ended Feb. 29; 1976, $2,672,997, 38.7 cents a share; 1975, $2,014,604, 29.2 cents.

Bushnell Communications Ltd., six months ended Feb. 29; 1976, $635,000, 37 cents a share; 1975, $610,000, 35.5 cents.

Cominco

Fred Burnet, chairman and chief executive officer of Cominco Ltd., reports the company spent $27.2 million on exploration in 1975, compared with $22.6 million in 1974.

Most of the money was spent in Canada and North America, he said. But significant programs were also carried out in Australia, Mexico and Europe.

Cominco reported 1975 net profits of $73.6 million or $4.34 a share, compared with $86.2 million or $5.08 for 1974.

Sales for the year were $746.2 million, compared with $781.9 million in 1974.

Burnet said profits were down because of a general economic recession and decreased metal demand.

The report said the company has an interest in 15 mines, six metal production companies, three metal fabrication companies, four chemical and fertilizer companies and has five exploration offices located round the world.

Company capital expenditures for 1975 were $125.6 million, compared with $88.7 million in 1974.

Burnet reported the company marketed $60 million in sinking fund debentures in February. The money is being used for capital expenditures and working capital.

At the company's main operations in Trail, a new 850 tons-a-day sulphuric acid plant was put into operation replacing two older plants.

Grosvenor

Grosvenor International Holdings Ltd. reports net earnings for 1975 before extraordinary items of $1.6 million or $1.22 a share, compared with $1.3 million or $1.01 a share the year before.

Including tax loss carry-forward credits, total net earnings were $1.9 million or $1.41 a share in 1975, compared with $1.45 million or $1.10 a share in 1974. Total revenues were $11.8 million, compared with $9.5 million in 1974.

Neville Gibson, president, said in the annual report that many of the development projects under construction a year ago have been completed and transferred to Grosvenor's investment portfolio.

Book value of revenue properties doubled during 1975 to $54 million, and total assets at year end were approximately $100 million.

Northwest

Northwest Sports Enterprises Ltd., which operates the Vancouver Canucks Hockey Club, reports profits of $656,673 or 60 cents a share, fully diluted, for the six months ended Feb. 29. This compares with profits of $141,336 or 14 cents a share for the same period last year.

Last year's figures have been restated to reflect a new accounting policy, the company said. The new policy accounts for expenses on the basis of home games played.

Frank Griffiths said the Canucks continue to play before capacity crowds.

"This strong fan support, improved minor league affiliation, and more efficient administration are all reflected in the improved earnings of the company," Griffiths said.

Ottawa Didn't Request Edited Budget: Wolfe

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said Tuesday he has had no contact with any external affairs department officials about deletions in the second printing of the B.C. budget speech.

The new version of the budget deletes the last 36 lines of the speech, including references to socialist parties "on the skids" in other parts of the world.

Prior to printing of the new edition, the opposition raised objections to the references and NDP leader Bill King appealed to External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen to intervene.

But Wolfe said in the legislature "to his knowledge" there had been no discussions between his department and MacEachen's.

Asked by Tory leader Scott Wallace if he felt it necessary as a courtesy to discuss the matter with MacEachen, Wolfe said no.

On Monday Wolfe told reporters the offending paragraphs were left out of the new version because the comments were necessary for B.C. residents but not for governments and financial institutions outside the province.

Service Stations Ask for Break

After a meeting with representatives of the Automotive Retailers' Association of B.C. Tuesday, Transport Minister Jack Davis said the association wants an end to preferential prices for certain gas stations and a ban on major oil companies directly entering the retail field.

"A number of them are in very difficult financial straits," the minister said, adding that members of the association have met with government representatives many times this year.

Davis said recommendations for relief to the dealers may be found in a report from the B.C. Energy Commission which is expected to be completed in about two weeks.

WARRANTS DEFENDED

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said Tuesday that four special warrants amounting to about $8 million were necessary because the former government underestimated expenditures.

Wolfe broke down the warrants to show that they were needed by various departments to cover needs not adequately provided for in the 1975-76 budget.

New Democratic Party MLAs have been pressing the government to justify the warrants, saying it appears the new government is merely trying to add as much as possible to last year's budget deficit.

TRAFFIC MISHAPS DOWN

Traffic accidents decreased in March and ICBC president Pat McGeer credits new ICBC policies for the decline.

McGeer said he will release figures shortly which show the number of accidents in March declined compared with February and with March of last year.

The decline is in all types of accidents, he said, and he described the figures as "very dramatic evidence" of the success of ICBC's policies.

Rewards for good drivers and the system of charging bad drivers more for their accidents has caused the change in driving habits, he said.

McGeer said the cause was not an over-all drop in the number of vehicles on the road but agreed to check statistics to see if there are less cars on the road since ICBC rates increased.

Renewal applications with ICBC did not decrease this year, he said.

$1M Deductible a Must

ICBC could not get "re-insurance" with less than $1 million deductible to cover school fire losses in B.C., ICBC president Pat McGeer said Tuesday.

McGeer said there has been some confusion about the government's announcement last week that new fire insurance contracts with school districts will carry a $1 million deductible clause.

Any fire losses up to $1 million will have to be covered on a shared basis by the province and the school districts.

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson said in the legislature the B.C. School Trustees Association fears it may be in contravention of the Public Schools Act which makes school trustees responsible for having adequate fire insurance for schools.

But McGeer said he wanted to assure all trustees that they will not be contravening the act.

He explained that the reason for the move is that school fire losses due to arson were so high last year, ICBC could not get re-insurance from major insurance firms with better than $1 million deductible.

McGeer said he will meet representatives of the BCSTA this afternoon to explain the situation.

Haymour Deal Under Review

Environment Minister Jim Nielsen said Tuesday his department is willing to study the case of Eddy Haymour, who claims he got a bad deal when the British Columbia government bought an island he owned in Okanagan Lake.

Haymour, who faces charges of holding about 20 people hostage in Beirut's Canadian embassy, is in Canada to press his case.

Premier Assures Northern Mayors

Premier Bill Bennett assured mayors from 12 northern communities Tuesday the government will look for long-term solutions to labor strife on the British Columbia Railway.

After meeting with the mayors the premier said the government hopes to bring some stability to the BCR by forgetting short-term solutions and concentration on methods of maintaining continual operation of the railway.

Although the premier did not elaborate on the government's intentions, he said the government will aim for improvements in the railway's labor-management relationships.

Williams Lake Mayor Jim Fraser said the mayors are primarily concerned with continuous operation of the BCR rather than current labor problems.

Egypt Replaces Arms Losses

TEL AVIV (Reuter) — Egypt has more than made up its arms losses since the October, 1973, war, Israeli television reported Monday. It said Egypt has received more than 1,100 tanks, many of them Soviet T62's. Other arms included anti-tank missiles from Britain, which is also supplying commando andopters, and planes from France and the Soviet Union.

Soviet Award

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union presented the Order of the October Revolution Tuesday to Henry Winston, national chairman of the American Communist party, the official Soviet news agency Tass reported.

SPRINTER JEROME WON'T RUN FOR SC

VANCOUVER (CP) — Former Olympic sprinter Harry Jerome said Tuesday he has decided not to seek the Social Credit nomination to oppose former premier Dave Barrett in the Vancouver East byelection.

Jerome said that personal considerations at this time dictated that he not seek the nomination, although he gave it serious consideration.

He added, however, that he definitely would be available to run in the next provincial election.

Date for the byelection in the two-seat riding has not yet been announced. It will be held to fill the seat left vacant when Bob Williams, resources minister in the former New Democratic Party government, resigned to allow Barrett to run.

B.C. Budget Bad For Poor: Lea

The provincial budget is good news for millionaires and bad news for the working poor and small businessmen, Graham Lea (NDP—Prince Rupert) said Tuesday.

The budget contains new taxes on the working people but none for the wealthy, he said.

During debate on the proposed budget, Lea accused the government of paying off election debts by taxing the poor and leaving the wealthy untouched.

During the same debate, Bill Vander Zalm, minister of human resources, said lawmakers in B.C. too often underestimate the intelligence of the public.

He said many speeches made by opposition members are inconsistent and an obvious waste of time.

Vander Zalm also accused the former NDP government of wasting money on high-priced assistants and office renovations while neglecting the needs of British Columbians.

"If ever the poor and unfortunate suffered," he said, "it was during the years of the previous administration."

Food Shortage Warning to AIB

MONTREAL (CP) — The federal anti-inflation board was warned today that if it tries to interfere extensively in the grocery products industry, Canada could experience a food shortage.

G. J. Ray, incoming chairman of the Grocery Products Manufacturers of Canada, told the association's annual meeting that investment in the food industry will decline seriously if prices and profits are slashed by the anti-inflation board.

Without adequate investment, the output of the grocery products industry will decrease and jeopardize supplies of processed food to the consumer, he said.

Mr. Ray expressed concern with the attitude of Beryl Plumptre, vice-chairman of the anti-inflation board, who recently said the performance of the board will be measured by its success in restraining food price increases.

"The one thing the anti-inflation board must avoid is the temptation to make the food industry a popular target," said Mr. Ray.

Even if the industry follows the board's guidelines, food prices may continue to increase because of "forces beyond our control."

When higher costs to the industry are not manifested in higher prices, profitability will decline, Mr. Ray said.

Already, the industry is suffering from low profitability, he said. Net profits amounted to only 3.4 per cent of sales in 1973, 2.5 per cent in 1974 and an estimated 2.5 per cent last year. The industry's return on investment of 11 per cent to 12 per cent was insufficient to attract necessary capital.

"If the anti-inflation board chooses to lean on profits and prices with too much zeal, they should be very sure that they aren't buying apparent price and cost stability at the expense of shortages, inefficiency and higher costs and prices in the not too distant future."

A text of Mr. Ray's address was released prior to delivery.

Trust Firm Boosts Mortgages

TORONTO (CP) — Canada Trust Co. has raised its conventional mortgage rate one quarter of a percentage point to 12.25 per cent, the highest among major lenders.

However, the firm's key interest rate for its five-year guaranteed investment certificates remains unchanged at 10.25 per cent.

During the last month, the flow of funds from purchasers of five-year guaranteed investment certificates has slowed. Money from this source is used by trust companies to fund mortgages for which the demand has remained strong, despite the high rates.

Other trust companies are quoting a conventional mortgage rate of 12 per cent, while chartered banks are offering to lend at 11.75 per cent.

No Plane Guarantee

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister James Richardson strongly restated his commitment to the Lockheed Orion patrol aircraft Tuesday, but said the government will not guarantee any bank loan to get it.

He added he is more optimistic than he has been in recent days that the armed forces will get the 18 aircraft, to cost slightly more than $1 billion.

He said Lockheed Aircraft Corp. and banks are continuing discussions on the possibility of Lockheed borrowing money to pay for the first years of a contract.

These were proceeding in a positive and constructive way.

Answering questions inside and outside the Commons, he reiterated past statements that the Lockheed P-3 LRAP — an ultramodern version of the Orion — is the most cost-effective patrol plane of any the government has considered.

He said no alterntive aircraft offers as much in terms of anti-submarine work, NATO commitments over the North Atlantic, modernization of equipment for the armed forces and benefits to Canadian businesses.

"It is very important we get the plane," he said.

He confirmed reports the cabinet recently reconfirmed its backing for the defence department choice of the Orion. That was about two weeks ago when the cabinet was asked if it still wanted the aircraft if Lockheed would extend its offer until April 30. Agreement on that extension was announced last week.

Lockheed is attempting to borrow up to $300 million from banks to finance the first 2½ years of a contract.

Smokers and Drinkers Bear Brunt in Ontario

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government imposed light tax increases in a few areas and reaffirmed its proclaimed spending-restraint policy in its 1976-77 budget Tuesday night.

Treasurer Darcy McKeough raised taxes by a net $330 million, with the weight falling on those who drink, smoke and pay health insurance premiums.

Small business, homeowners and people who eat out got minor benefits.

The combination of tax boosts, expected higher taxable earnings among the population and a degree of restraint in government spending combined to bring the predicted over-all deficit down by $659 million — a drop of more than one-third from 1975-76.

On April 21, beverage prices will go up by 30-35 cents for a 25-ounce bottle of spirits, 15 cents for a 24-bottle case of beer and 10-15 cents a bottle for wine.

Premiums under the Ontario Health Insurance Plan (OHIP) will rise by $5 a month for single persons and $10 for families, to $16 and $32, and the cost of private and semi-private hospital rooms will be boosted.

The OHIP premium increase will cost $228 million — most of it borne by employers. Alcohol and cigarette taxes will raise an additional $50 million apiece.

Lesser tax increases will bring in $25 million for a total of $353 million.

These consist mainly of an increase in the basic tax on insurance premiums to three from two per cent, with the tax on property insurance also going up a point from its present 2½ per cent.

This is expected to bring in $20 million.

The province's 50,000 small businesses were given an $11-million tax reduction — an average $220 a year apiece and there were scattered reductions in the seven-per-cent retail sales tax, amounting to a $12-million saving for taxpayers.

The sales tax was removed from insulation for existing homes and from part of the purchase price of approved mobile homes.

The 10-per-cent eating-out tax will apply on meals costing more than $5, instead of the previous ceiling of $4.

Canadian Couple Found Dead

TEL AVIV (AP) — A Canadian man and woman missing for a month have been found dead in the Sinai desert and the man had been decapitated, the Canadian embassy said today.

The embassy said it was withholding the names of the 31-year-old man and the 21-year-old woman.

An embassy spokesman said the bodies were found Monday by a Bedouin in hills about seven miles southwest of Nuweiba near the road south of the Red Sea port of Eilat.

No cause of death has been determined, the embassy said, but the initial investigation did not indicate foul play.

A spokesman for the embassy said an examination of the man's body did not indicate an instrument had been used to sever the head. One theory was that the decapitation was the work of animals that came upon the bodies.

The embassy said the two tourists had been missing for about a month. An Israeli pathologist placed the time of death at least a month ago.

CIVIL RIGHTS GROUPS ALERTED

Judge Criticizes the Law

People concerned with civil liberties should look at sections of the Combines Investigation Act "with something of a jaundiced eye," Judge Montague Drake said in granting a 43-year-old salesman an absolute discharge on a false advertising charge.

The imposition by Parliament of strict accountability "is an exercise of state power which is not really to be commended. However, it is there. Parliament has legislated it this way and that is why I was obliged to convict."

Salesman Glen Edward Clarke, 43, of 1331 Vining, was found guilty of advertising the Ball-Matic Air Injector as a device which placed in the carburetor of a car would increase performance. Judge Drake said the device was "inherently incapable" of doing what the advertising claimed it would.

Defence lawyer Mike Hutchison said his client had trusted information supplied by the company as the basis for the advertising claims.

Judge Drake said he would not have convicted Clarke "if it had been incumbent upon the Crown to prove the existence of the mental element necessary to make it a normal criminal offence, that is, some sense of wrongdoing on the part of Mr. Clarke.

"There was, indeed, evidence that his representations were based upon information which I think it was quite reasonable for him to regard as sound. In these circumstances, as has been held before in other cases dealing with statutory offences, practical justice is reflected in the disposition rather than the verdict that the court arrives at.

"I find this to be a proper case, where Mr. Clarke based his actions upon information largely supplied by others and which he had reason to believe was reasonably correct, to be a case where a discharge would be proper.

"I can't see any point in imposing conditions. In this case there will be an unconditional discharge."

Forces Base To Be Given Big Facelift

New buildings will be constructed, others modernized and new jetties built in a 10-year program expected to start this year at CFB Esquimalt.

Lt.-Col. W. P. Pollard, base engineering officer, says the plan is in its final stages and, while declining to put a price tag on it, he conceded the program will be a "multi-million dollar project."

"The base development plan is to correct a lot of problems we know we have at the base," he added.

Pollard expects the first project will be an extension to the dockyard firehall. Another high priority is the construction of a new construction engineering building.

"There will also be a new hospital, we hope," he said, "At the moment we are trying to determine what (hospital) services the armed forces should be giving."

Other new buildings planned are ship engineering and vehicle maintenance shops, as well as a new ship repair facility.

Pollard said some additional jetties will be built and others relocated in an effort to get better efficiency.

In addition, the base's power distribution system will be updated.

Pollard says bases across the country either have similar programs ready to start or are preparing programs to update base facilities.

The building program was welcomed by Bill Hitchin, regional vice-president of the Union of National Defence Employees. The UNDE has 1,500 members employed on the base.

Earlier this week in Ottawa, UNDE national president Jack Power, while agreeing that armed forces personnel are doing their best to keep bases operational, said money is desperately needed to make them safe and completely functional.

Hitchin said improving armed forces facilities is long overdue. He said neglect of them is partially due to the fact that most facilities are not in view of the general public.

"When you look at customs, post office and public works buildings and compare them with armed forces bases, it just knocks your eyes out . . . the difference," he said.

Hitchin said some of the buildings still being used at Work Point Barracks should have been torn down long ago.

"They are temporary Second World War buildings, virtually thrown up for the duration," he said. "They (the authorities) do their best to keep the outsides looking neat and painted white and green but DND (department of national defence) buildings are, as a rule, shabby and in need of work inside."

Hitchin said several of the Work Point buildings still have to rely on space heaters.

"Space heaters, where else do you find them," he asked, "It's been on the agenda for four or five years to put furnaces in but the money's not been forthcoming."

Pollard said if such buildings are to be retained within the 10-year program they, too, will be improved.

Government employees strive for that healthy feeling of fitness

Little Sweat Goes Long Way For Desk-Bound Pen-Pushers

Apologies to Tennyson, of course, but right now, as daffodils burst forth and the sun gets a little warmer each day, provincial health department officials are hoping that physical conditioning will be foremost in the minds of government employees.

And they're hoping that not just young men's fancies will be turned in this direction but young women's, too, and the not-so-young and not-so-svelte of both sexes as well.

Obviously believing in the maxim that if you're active you feel better (thus reducing absenteeism and improving both morale and productivity), the department's occupational health branch is doing as much as it can to see that employees swing into spring with a little more oomph this year.

At 539 Superior Street, an old house, provided by the Public Service Commission and renovated by the department of public works, was opened three months ago as a Physical Activity Centre.

It boasts an ideal location right behind the Legislative Buildings and only a block and-a-half from Beacon Hill Park; shower and change area; two dynatrons (indoor running machines) plus a wide variety of indoor exercise bicycles; a carpeted exercise area; and pleasant background music to relax and soothe you.

It is, quips employee fitness director Gord Stewart, "the only fitness centre around that's got stained glass windows!"

The centre is open weekdays from 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. and government employees can either take advantage of any of the several group sessions offered or go over and do their own thing.

There are "Morning Madness" sessions for those crazy enough to want to limber up before settling in behind their desks, mid-day sessions during the staggered lunchtimes between 11:30 a.m. and 2 p.m. and after-work sessions starting from about 3 p.m.

On the wall are three huge charts showing the various positions for warmup exercises which are designed to be a progressive routine in three stages lasting 10 weeks. There is always an instructor (Gord has 10 part-time helpers) at the centre to make sure they are exercising properly.

"It's crucial that they learn the proper technique or it will not be beneficial," explains

Stewart. "And it could even be dangerous."

"We suggest they try to work out for 30 minutes three times a week," he says. "It's good if they do the warmup exercises for 15 minutes and then do indoor cycling or walking and jogging for 15 minutes."

"It's really a lifestyle change we're trying to achieve," he explains, adding that also provided are lectures and seminars on diet and nutrition given by Elspeth Charsley.

Government employees can get involved in "Yogaerobics" — a total fitness package combining the physical aspects of yoga with a gradual walk-jog-run endurance program — and in such recreational clubs as hiking, orienteering, cycling, water polo and synchronized swimming.

The 27-year-old Stewart, who got his master's degree in physical education last year at Simon Fraser University, doesn't think the government employees here are any less-fit than employees anywhere in Canada.

"But our health department is very forward thinking," he adds. "It's the only government that is doing anything like this on such a scale."

And yet, despite attempts so far to induce provincial employees to think fitness, he admits the centre is not being used as much as it could be.

So far, about 300 employees are involved in some kind of training program. But of these only about 150 have been working out at the centre.

For those who feel they work a little too far away from the centre, the staff is even prepared to send along an instructor to a group of employees anywhere.

"We are doing this now with staff at both the Victoria Mental Health Centre and Glendale Hospital," says Stewart. "And these two groups have by far our best attendance records."

"You know, we're not suggesting that someone come in here and ride an indoor bike forever," says Gord. "We would like to see them learn the proper concepts of exercising and then they might look around and find something in the community where they live to carry on with."

"We're trying to convince people that being physically active is fun and beneficial . . . we want to get them started on their way."

Building, Car Lost In Fire At Mine

Fire destroyed a car and empty building at the Sunro mine near Jordan River Tuesday at noon while an inspection of the mine's upper level was being made.

Sooke RCMP said a watchman, a government mine inspector and a representative of Cominco were away from the mine buildings about 90 minutes and when they returned the wooden structure housing a laboratory, two offices and first aid room was engulfed by flames.

There was no indication of arson, but a survey of the blaze may be made by the provincial fire marshal's office.

Police estimated total loss at $15,300 including $5,000 for the new car, $10,000 for contents of the building and $300 for the frame building.

The mine has been closed 15 months awaiting improvement in the copper market or an easing of mine royalties in B.C.

Watchman Brian de Yaeger was taking mine inspector W. C. Robinson, of Nanaimo, and K. V. F. Meyer, of Trail, to examine part of the operation, police said.

De Yaeger's wife, who was living a short distance away from the mine, was the last to leave the building where she had used the telephone before locking the door and going home. Police said she was a non-smoker and there was no sign of any fire when she put down the phone and tidied up the office before leaving.

It was about noon when the three men returned to find the fire well under way and the building beyond saving.

Police thought electrical wiring may have been the cause of the blaze, but it was also noted the laboratory may have contained some unstable chemicals, which could have ignited spontaneously.

WALKER

The B.C. cabinet is ignoring Premier Bill Bennett's pre-election promise that the provincial government would not interfere with the running of Crown corporations, a Canadian Merchant Service Guild spokesman said today.

He said the cabinet is taking action that could scuttle the Princess Marguerite.

Assistant secretary-treasurer Capt. Maury Sjoquist said his union and the two others which negotiated a first contract with the B.C. Steamship Co. (formed by the former NDP government to operate the Princess Marguerite as a Crown corporation) have been informed that the cabinet has thrown out the contract ratified between the company and the unions in February.

The other unions involved are the Seafarers International Union and the Brotherhood of Railway, Airline and Steamship Clerks.

"We reached a collective agreement in February and we have waited 1½ months," Sjoquist said. "We were told by (B.C. Steamship Co.) manager Bob McHaffie on Friday that the agreement has been squelched by the cabinet."

Since coming to power, Sjoquist said the Socreds have "loaded the board of B.C. Steamships Co. with cabinet ministers" — Transport Minister Jack Davis, Deputy Premier Grace McCarthy, Attorney-General Garde Gardom and Economic Development Minister Donald Phillips.

In spite of their numbers, Sjoquist said, the company directors referred the contract ratification to cabinet because "it's too hot a potato for them to handle."

The Crown corporation comes under the jurisdiction of the federal government's conciliation department and Sjoquist said a letter has gone to that department today, requesting the help of a conciliation officer.

The collective agreement calls for wage parity of Princess Marguerite personnel with appropriate jobs in the B.C. Ferries fleet.

Davis said Friday he was rejecting the collective agreement because wage increases are not within the federal anti-inflation guidelines.

Sjoquist said Davis has no justification for this act because the unions involved had no increases last year, agreeing to stay within the guidelines set by their agreement with CP Rail, which operated the vessel prior to it being bought by the government.

"The company, while it had a few financial problems, agreed there should be parity," Sjoquist said. "The ship's officers (of the Marguerite) have the same responsibilities and require the same certification as those in the B.C. Ferries service."

"That ship will likely not sail this spring," he added. "Some of our own people are most upset and feel they should be looking for other jobs.

"We've advised them to hold on. Our own people aren't going to stand for it."

COURTHOUSE HOMECOMING POSSIBLE IN THE FALL

Relief may be in sight before the end of this year for the over-crowded superior courts in Victoria temporarily housed in the former St. Ann's Academy girls' school.

Dr. J. J. Gow, president of the Victoria Bar Association, said Tuesday some of the courts may be able to return to the Burdett Street courthouse in the fall.

"The best information we have is that providing the present rate of construction is not interfered with, by act of God or a strike in the construction industry, it is just possible that some of the courts may be able to return to the courthouse in or about the month of October," he said.

County and Supreme Courts were shifted to St. Ann's last summer when work crews moved into the courthouse to add two floors. The Court of Appeal sittings in Victoria were moved to Vancouver.

What will be done with the two new floors is "still very nebulous," he said, but there is a likelihood the law library will be moved from the main floor to one of the new floors.

The provincial government, it had been thought, would use the new floors for extra courtrooms but it was learned after construction started that the new space would be used for general offices.

The province has also had plans to shift provincial courts from Fisgard Street into the Burdett Street courthouse by remodelling the main and lower main floors.

Speaking of provincial courts, Gow said "all that can be said is that there is every likelihood additional courtrooms will be constructed on the main floor only for the time being and if they are, some of these courtrooms may be made available for use of some of the provincial courts."

Summer Job Centre Opens for Students

Summer employment opportunities for students in the Greater Victoria area will again be co-ordinated by a special Canada Manpower Centre this year, Manpower manager Stan Purdy announced today.

The student centre at 546 Yates Street opened for business Monday and will be in operation weekdays from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. providing service to job-seeking students and potential employers.

Officer in charge of the centre is Anne Walker, a graduate of the University of Victoria, who will be assisted throughout the summer by five trained student counsellors.

Purdy said Mrs. Walker will contact employers to discuss the services provided at the centre, and to inquire about their summer staffing needs.

Mrs. Walker said she expects this year's total registration to exceed the 1975 total of 40,000, and already there have been more than 500 applications for jobs.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. What was the Whiskey Ring? It sounds interesting. J.L.

A. Very interesting in the 1870s. In fact, scandalous. The Whiskey Ring was an association of whiskey manufacturers and high U.S. government officials who conspired to cheat the government of taxes imposed on the distillers. It was one of the great political scandals of the Ulysses's S. Grant administration.

Islanders Less Nervous

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (CP) — For 20 minutes, Glenn Resch of New York Islanders, the second-best goalie in the National Hockey League this season, thought he was playing in Fantasyland Tuesday night.

Then suddenly the Islanders got rid of their tightness and scored three successive goals in the second period, then held on for a 5-3 win over Vancouver Canucks in the opening game of their best-of-three first-round playoff series.

Admitting that he had a bad case of nerves in the first period when Dennis Ververgaert and John Gould scored on long shots, Resch said it was a weird game right from the beginning.

"Both teams were giving up bad goals," he said. "Nobody seemed to want to take control.

"It was a crazy period and that's the kind of games we've played against these guys, odd games."

Five of the goals came during short-handed situations and rookie Curt Ridley of the Canucks was shaky in the nets too.

Then, with Islander defenceman Denis Potvin serving a roughing penalty from 18:22 of the first period, veteran Lorne Henning walked in on Ridley after a perfect pass from Westfall, scoring just 10 seconds into the second period.

Coach Al Arbour of the Islanders felt that was the turning point in the game after Resch had come through with four big saves while Potvin was off the ice.

Henning's short-handed goal was the second of the game, Gould's 40-footer in the first period coming during a similar situation.

Some hard digging by Jude Drouin, J.P. Parise and Billy MacMillan led to New York's fourth goal by MacMillan.

Bobby Nystrom made it 5-2 for the Islanders on a power play. Defenceman Bob Dailey ended the scoring on a power-play goal for the Canucks early in the third period.

There was a general feeling among the Islanders that the always-tough Canucks will be even tougher when the series resumes Thursday night in Vancouver. If a third game is required, it will be played here Saturday afternoon.

Vancouver coach Phil Maloney was disappointed about the loss.

"We didn't play the sound game we usually play against the Islanders," he said.

Centre Andre St. Laurent, who did a tremendous job keeping Mike Walton of the Canucks in check most of the game, got into a fight with the veteran centre early in the game.

"I think it took a lot out of Walton," said Maloney.

St. Laurent got a minor and a major and Walton a major. Of the 11 penalties in the game, the Islanders received seven.

Coach Maloney had to juggle his defence in third period after backliners Tracey Pratt and Dennis Kearns suffered facial cuts and needed stitches.

Clutching Islander Bounced off feet, Gerry Hart of New York Islanders puts clutch on Garry Monahan to prevent Vancouver player from getting to puck during opening game of National Hockey League playoff series. Hart scored first goal for Islanders, who went on to hand Canucks 5-3 defeat Tuesday at Uniondale, N.Y.

Staniowski Makes Boivin Look Good

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Thanks to a hunch by coach Leo Boivin, St. Louis Blues own a 1-0 lead in their opening-round National Hockey League playoff series against Buffalo Sabres.

"I sat down two weeks ago and said, 'I've got to go with experience'," Boivin said after the Blues surprised the Sabres 5-2 Tuesday night.

"But I had to change my thinking," he added. "The way the kid's been playing, even if we'd opened the series at Buffalo I'd still have had to sit down and think about it."

The kid Boivin referred to is Ed Staniowski, a 20-year-old goaltender who was playing in only his 12th NHL game. He stood up well under a 39-shot Buffalo barrage in the important opener of the best-of-three series.

Boivin was so impressed with the five-foot-nine native of Regina that he hinted he may stay with him for Thursday night's second game.

The Sabres, with one of the best power-plays in the NHL, tested Staniowski early but he came up with the big saves.

Derek Sanderson opened the scoring when he beat Sabre netminder Gerry Desjardins with a slap shot at 4:14 of the first period.

Buffalo's Danny Gare, a 50-goal scorer this season, had a breakaway about two minutes later but Staniowski made the stop. Then Chuck Lefley gave the Blues a 2-0 lead at 8:28 with a short-handed goal.

"When you get down 2-0 in a play-off game it's tough," said Blues centre Garry Unger. "We can't take them lightly though. Just because we beat them once doesn't mean we've won the Stanley Cup."

Larry Patey gave the Blues a three-goal advantage before the first period ended and Unger extended the Blues lead to 4-0 at 1:56 of the final period.

Richard Martin scored the first Sabre goal at 8:37 but Lefley came back with his second goal of the game to give the Blues a 5-1 lead. Buffalo's Jacques Richard completed the scoring at 18:11.

Buffalo coach Floyd Smith conceeded that St. Louis "hustled and beat us to the puck all night.

The series moves to Buffalo for the second game Thursday night and Sabre captain Jim Schoenfeld said "We're going to have to rectify the situation by winning at home.

"Either we do or it'll be all over for us and a long summer."

Leafs Slow Penguins; Thomas Does the Rest

TORONTO (CP) — Coach Ken Schinkel of Pittsburg Penguins says Toronto goaltender Wayne Thomas was the sole reason his team didn't light up the scoreboard in the first game of their National Hockey League opening-round playoff with the Maple Leafs.

"He played the best game I've seen him play," Schinkel said after Thomas turned aside 35 Pittsburgh shots to lead the Leafs to a 4-1 victory over the Penguins. "He stopped us cold time and again."

Thomas came up with key stops on two Penguin 50-goal scorers this season, Pierre Larouche and Jean Pronovost, before allowing Stan Gilbertson the only Pittsburgh goal of the game early in the third period.

Thomas, who was playing in his first NHL playoff game ever, credited the Leafs checking game, particularly during power plays, for making things easier for him.

"There were really no difficult shots during the Penguin power plays," he said. "The fowards did a really great job. They stayed in the box and didn't take chances in front of me."

Schinkel said the Leafs, who lost four of five games against the Penguins this season, didn't do anything fancy to gain a 1-0 lead in the best-of-three series.

"They didn't do anything different than we expected," he said. "We knew they were going to play the body and they did it. They threw some good body checks.

"The strategy in playing the Leafs is either hit them hard or skate exceptionally hard and we didn't do either."

The Leafs threw their weight around early but had to pay as referee Dave Newell assessed overlapping penalties which left them shorthanded for two minutes and 44 seconds in the first period. However, their penalty killers responded and the Penguins failed to get a good scoring opportunity during that time.

Jim McKenny opened the scoring for Toronto at 13:01 of the first period and that advantage was quickly increased to 3-0 with second-period goals by Lanny McDonald and Bob Neely.

"Glennie played one heck of a game," Kelly said. "He was handing out checks you don't see too often anymore. But that's what you've got to do with this Pittsburgh club. If they get a chance, they can put it in."

The Leafs, who haven't won a game at the Civic Centre since Jan. 9, 1973, travel to Pittsburgh for the second game of the series Thursday. A third game, if necessary, will be played Friday in Toronto.

Moen Paces Soccer Nats

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Western Canada portion of Canada's national soccer team blanked a Simon Fraser University squad 4-0 Tuesday, but not without help from SFU.

Garnet Moen of Victoria scored twice in the first half and Ken Whitehead and John McGrane added singles in the second. Whitehead and McGrane are SFU players who also are members of the national squad.

Kings Play It Tough

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mike Murphy, the Los Angeles Kings captain, says his team-mates made their shots count in their 2-1 victory Tuesday night over Atlanta Flames in the first game of their National Hockey League preliminary playoff series.

"Our experience from last year's playoffs helped us tonight," Murphy said after the game. "We didn't take any cheap shots at the goal. It was an extremely physical game and we are a tired hockey team right now.

Rogie Vachon, who played for the Kings, said "We don't want to have to come back to Los Angeles for a third game.

"So we're going all out to wrap it up in Atlanta Thursday night."

The Kings travel to the Omni for the second game of the best-of-three series on Thursday.

Tommy Williams, who scored one goal early in the opening period and assisted on the other Los Angeles goal, said he was mentally prepared for the game.

"I really psyched myself up all day," Williams said. "It was a tight-checking game and getting that early goal 50 seconds into the game relieved a lot of pressure and it gets a team going."

Bob Nevin made it 2-0 for the Kings at 2:40 of the second period when he connected on a backhander from 12 feet out. Williams set up the play with a perfect pass to the Los Angeles veteran.

With 5:24 left to play, Atlanta defenceman Barry Gibbs got the Flames on the scoreboard when he blasted a 50-foot slap shot past Vachon, who is the best active Stanley Cup goalie with a 1.93 goals-against average.

Atlanta coach Fred Creighton pulled goaltender Dan Bouchard with 21 seconds left in the game in favor of an extra extra attacker, but the Kings held on to score their fourth victory in five meetings with the Flames this season.

"I guess we played well," Creighton said. "I thought we had some good chances to score in the second and third period. We had enough chances to win, but so did they.

"The Kings forechecked well and played aggressively, which is what we have to do. They have the home-ice advantage that gives them two chances and we've got only one."

Kings coach Bob Pulford said "We played very well tonight," giving special credit to the line of Williams, Nevin and Butch Goring.

"We didn't have many scoring opportunities, but I think this is the way all the games will be."

Pam Kozak Sparks Win By Spectrum

Spectrum, led by a three-goal effort from Pam Kozak, blanked Dunsmuir 4-0 Monday in a Greater Victoria High School Girls' Soccer League match.

Maureen Cockerill scored the other Spectrum tally.

In another match, Kym Mullan scored twice to lead Oak Bay to a 3-1 decision over Reynolds. Jeanne McKinnon scored the other Oak Bay goal while Wendy Thompson averted a shutout of Reynolds.

CFL All-Stars to Try Once More

EDMONTON (CP) — The Canadian Football League's East-west all-star game May 29 at Clarke Stadium is a do-or-die effort, Peter Travis, the game's co-chairman, said Tuesday.

Travis told a news conference it has come to the point, following last year's cancellation due to lack of fan support, that both the league and the players association "had to do it right or not do it at all."

The coaches said this year they will play their best players, and CTV network says it will televise the game, which neither the CTV nor CBC would do last year.

This year, the league's coaches voted on who should play from the other teams, although there were a couple of significant ommissions —Johnny Rodgers of Montreal Alouettes and Dav Cutler, Eskimos record-breaking field goal kicker, who wasn't selected.

"Rodgers is the one foul-up," Travis admitted. "He's not a member of the CFL Players Association and he doesn't want to be."

Replacing Cutler will be Bernie Ruoff, the placement kicker and punter of the Blue Bombers who got in because he could handle both ends of the kicking game. The teams will have the same Canadian - American breakdown in numbers as any team in league play.

For the West it will be:

Edmonton Eskimos: Tom Wilkinson, Larry Highbaugh, Dale Potter, Charlie Turner, Dave Fennell, George McGowan and Tyrone Walls;

Calgary Stampeders. Willie Burden, Rudy Linterman, Vern Roberson, Tom and Joe Forzani, Max Huber and John Helton;

Winnipeg Blue Bombers: Ruoff, Merv Walker, Bob Swift, Harry Walters and Jim Heighton;

B.C. Lions: Jim Young, Lou Harris, Al Wilson, Layne McDowell, Bill Baker and Wayne Smith.

For the East it will be:

Ottawa Rough Riders: Tom Clements, Jim Foley, Wayne Tosh, Art Green, Jerry Campbell, Rudy Sims, Jeff Turcotte and Tony Gabriel;

Montreal Alouettes: Dickie Harris, Mike Weiger, Wayne Conrad, Barry Randall, Dave Braggins, Glen Weir, Peter Dalla Riva and Junior Ah You;

Toronto Argonauts: Larry Uteck, Mike Eben, Zenon Andrusyshyn, Steve Dennis, Sam Cvijanovich, Granny Liggins, Gene Mack and Jim Corrigall;

Marshall May Be Friendly But Gives Away Nothing

By The Associated Press

He's giving the hitters nothing, as usual.

The Los Angeles Dodgers' relief ace, who's more cordial to his fans and reporters than in past seasons, remains an enigma to opposing baseball teams.

Marshall, despite arriving late in spring training camp, posted his third successive strong performance Tuesday in a 6-2 triumph over Oakland A's.

The tireless Cy Young winner worked three powerful innings—striking out five batters and allowing three hits. In eight innings of relief pitching since coming to camp March 24, Marshall has allowed only one earned run.

Burt Hooton, who won his last 12 games last year and a career-high 18, went the first six innings for the Dodgers and left wih the game tied at 2-2 before Marshall came on the scene.

"I've got a little way to go," said Hooton. "It wasn't six strong innings.

"At the end of last year I was throwing twice as well as I'm throwing now."

Bill Buckner, enjoying one of his best springs, had a double and a single for Los Angeles, improving his hitting record to 18-for-43 this spring.

In Tuesday's other games, California Angels defeated San Francisco Giants 3-1, San Diego Padres trounced Milwaukee Brewers 7-1, Chicago Cubs stopped Cleveland Indians 7-5, Pittsburgh Pirates outscored St. Louis Cardinals 10-6, Texas Rangers routed Baltimore Orioles 9-3, Cincinnati Reds crushed Detroit Tigers 10-1, Boston Red Sox nipped Atlanta Braves 5-4, New York Mets beat New York Yankees 2-1 and Minnesota Twins defeated Houston Astros 6-5.

Rain prevented two games — between Philadelphia Phillies and Chicago White Sox and between Kansas City Royals and Montreal Expos.

Don Kirkwood allowed only two hits over seven innings and struck out seven, leading California over San Francisco. Mike Ivie drove in three runs for San Diego.

Manny Sanguillen, Frank Taveras and Al Oliver hit eighth-inning home runs for Pittsburgh. The Pirates and Cardinals combined for 29 hits, seven of them home runs.

Rick Burleson's two-run homer with two out in the ninth inning lifted Boston over Atlanta. Del Unser's run-scoring double in the third inning lifted the Mets over the Yankees.

DUNN EARNS TITLE SHOT AT ALI BY STOPPING AUGUST IN THREE

LONDON (AP) — Britain's Richard Dunn, 23, battered Germany's Berndt August into submission in the third round Tuesday night to win the vacant European heavyweight title and earn a shot at Muhammad Ali's world title May 24 in Munich.

Italian referee Amleto Belagamba stopped the fight at one minute 38 seconds of the third round as 6-foot-7, 213-pound August staggered about the ring with his left eye completely closed.

The 31-year-old Dunn, who never fought for the British title until he had passed his 30th birthday, already had a contract signed to fight Ali. But it was conditional on his becoming European champion first.

August, 23, never had a chance in the brief and ferocious fight against Dunn who weighed 211½ pounds.

Dunn now is poised for a world title fight with a reported purse of $200,000 dollars for the challenger.

Dunn's record stands at 42 fights of which he won 33 and lost nine. August, in three years as a pro, is 21-3-1.

Recreation Council Brief Urges Trail Improvements

Members of the Outdoor Recreation Council of British Columbia appear to have done an exhaustive amount of research while preparing a brief which was recently submitted to recreation and tourism minister Grace McCarthy.

The brief calls for a formal trails and access program in British Columbia, similar to measures already established in Great Britain, the United States and several other provinces of Canada.

Trails outside parks are now subject to disruption by other land uses such as logging, mining, power lines, hydro dams, road-building, residential development and the sale or lease of public lands.

These trails, which have no legal status no matter how heavily used or how long they have been in existence, could take a great deal of pressure off existing park facilities if properly protected.

The brief points out that B.C. needs an act covering trails and recreation areas within existing land and water jurisdictions.

It goes on to state the act should:

— "designate a government agency to have legislated responsibility to develop and co-ordinate a Provincial Trails and Access System and Program with other government agencies and the public.

— "encourage municipal and regional governments to develop recreational trails and use area plans for all types of outdoor recreationists.

— "designate categories of trails (such as historic), wild and scenic rivers, long-distance recreation trails and shorter trails that will be protected in perpetuity.

— "give some protection to significant trails outside parks established by custom, and provide for the relocation of those trails if interrupted by urban growth or industrial operations."

Although the access picture on Vancouver Island has changed for the better in recent years, largely due to public pressure on forest companies, the brief points out that this is entirely on a volunteer basis and such attitudes vary tremendously around the province.

"There is a need for public access legislation to clearly and formally outline public rights to access on public land. The public needs to be provided with better information about their rights of access and concomitant responsibilities."

Negative impacts of public access to rural areas, alpine areas, wilderness back-country and hunting areas will also have to be given high priority while planning logging roads and cutting operations.

Funding methods now in use elsewhere, such as a surtax on recreational equipment, need to be developed to cover the costs of facility construction and maintenance programs undertaken by both public agencies and private groups.

And, contributions from private industry for public recreation facilities approved by the government should be allowed as a deduction from taxes.

The brief also calls for a comprehensive inventory of existing trails; a greater input from the public on planning, management and maintenance of trails; establishment of criteria to minimize adverse noise and visual impacts; provision of standardized trail markers and adequate trail information as well as creation of site-specific guidelines for trail construction and maintenance taking into account environmental characteristics, degree of use and mode of travel.

Regarding this last factor, the brief states:

"Conflicts between mechanized and non-mechanized trail activities need to be resolved by formally designating separate trails and areas for snowmobiles, trail bikes, ATV's and motor boats."

The brief also knocks the government over inadequate provision of trails within provincial parks, especially those close to main population centres, and asks that trails should be made to connect whenever possible to form larger systems.

In order to get the trails and access program off the ground, the Outdoor Recreation Council recommends designating a government agency to direct development; establishing a Provincial Trails Advisory Committee consisting of recreationists, native people, industry, municipal governments and the designated agency to ensure public input; formation of a technical committee of civil servants from agencies affected by trail policies to represent the views of their departments in interactions with the Advisory Committee; and starting a trails inventory program using student labor this summer.

The Outdoor Recreation Council of B.C. stands ready to co-ordinate the work of the Advisory Committee under the direction of the designated government agency.

Although this writer feels the organizational setup envisioned above is a little unwieldy, to say the least, there is a real need to establish a proper system of trails and recreational areas on a standardized basis throughout the province.

Piecemeal management of trails and recreational areas by different levels and agencies of government cannot continue while the tide of people demanding these facilities continues to rise.

Oak Bay Tramps Titans

Oak Bay Barbarians, braced for a tough battle that failed to materialize, romped to a 37-6 decision over visiting Victoria Titans in one of three Greater Victoria High School Rugby League matches played Tuesday afternoon.

In other encounters, Claremont Spartans knocked Spectrum out of the playoff picture with a 28-21 victory and St. Michael's University School blanked Mt. Douglas Mountainmen, 35-0.

Pat Trelawney kicked three penalty goals and two conversions to set the pace for the defending B.C. spring champion Barbarians while Paul Leslie and Paul Monaghan scored two tries each and single four-pointers were added by Tom Sinnott and Olaf Neilson.

Federko, Beck Head Stars

SASKATOON (CP) — Bernie Federko of Saskatoon Blades and Barry Beck of New Westminster Bruins came closest to receiving unanimous selection to the 1975-76 Western Canada Hockey League all-star team.

Federko, the scoring champion who broke Bobby Clarke's scoring record in the league with 187 points, and Beck, a defenceman, received 51 out of a possible 55 points in final balloting by the 12 team coaches, to make it a year when two 18-year-olds were top choice.

The runaway leader in goaltender selection was Glen Hanlon of Brandon Wheat Kings, getting 41 points, almost double the points of his nearest rival, rookie Dave Parro of Saskatoon.

Goal-scoring champion Don Murdoch of Medicine Hat Tigers, who scored 88 times this season, nosed out the Blades' Blair Chapman for the rightwing position, while his team-mate Morris Lukowich was selected as the all-star leftwinger.

Runners-up in balloting were goalkeeper Parro, defencemen Brad Maxwell of New Westminster and Tim Williams of Victoria Cougars; centre Greg Carroll of Medicine Hat, rightwinger Chapman and leftwinger Steve Clippingdale of New Westminster.

All-star coach honors went to the Bruins' Ernie "Punch" McLean, who guided his team to a first-place finish and setting three records along the way — the Bruins accumulated the most points ever by a team as well as most wins and total goals scored.

The top goalkeeper award, which goes to the goaltender with the lowest goals-against average, was claimed by Carey Walker of New Westminster, edging out Parro.

Other individual awards, including most valuable player, most gentlemanly player, outstanding defenceman and rookie of the year, will be announced later.

First-round playoff action continues tonight with New Westminster at Brandon, Winnipeg at Kamloops and Lethbridge at Saskatoon. New Westminster holds a 6-0 lead in its 10-point series; Kamloops had a 6-4 edge in an eight-point series and Lethbridge has a 5-3 edge in its eight-point series. Victoria and Medicine Hat open a six-point quarter final Thursday in the Alberta city.

Goal — Hanlon, Brandon, 41; Parro, Saskatoon, 22.
Defence — Beck, New Westminster, 51; McCarthy, Winnipeg, 47; Maxwell, New Westminster, 34; Williams, Victoria, 21.
Centre — Federko, Saskatoon, 51; Carroll, Medicine Hat, 31.

Cougars Away for Two

Victoria Cougars will travel to Medicine Hat Thursday for the first game of their best-of-five Western Canada Hockey League playoff series against the Tigers. Second game will be played at Medicine Hat, Saturday; third in Victoria, Sunday; the fourth in Victoria, Tuesday, April 13, and the fifth, if necessary, in Medicine Hat, Wednesday, April 14.

Wakely's Heroics Cost Each Crusader Dearly

By The Canadian Press

Ernie Wakely cost each Cleveland Crusader $2,000 Tuesday.

Mariners' veteran goaltender turned aside 57 shots as San Diego beat Crusaders 3-2 in overtime on the last night of the World Hockey Association season, consigning Cleveland to second place in East Division standings.

In Tuesday's other games, Quebec crushed Toronto Toros 10-6, Winnipeg defeated Calgary 5-3 and Houston dropped Phoenix 8-5.

The loss left Crusaders one point behind Indianapolis Racers, who now pocket $50,000—or more than $2,000 a player—for finishing first in their division.

Wakely was at his best in the third period when Cleveland had a 20-to-1 edge in shots but could produce only one goal.

This year's playoff format has the Canadian Division producing one finalist and the two United States divisions the other.

The Canadian semi-finals are best-of-seven series. Edmonton Oilers open Friday against the Jets at Winnipeg in one series while a series between Quebec Nordiques and Calgary Cowboys starts Saturday at Quebec.

Indianapolis and Houston Aeros, who topped the West Division, have byes into the U.S. semi-finals. The quarter-finals, which begin Friday, are best-of-five affairs.

Cleveland will play New England Whalers at Hartford, Conn., while San Diego opens at Phoenix against the Roadrunners.

Tardif scored his 71st goal and added his assists to bring his point total to 148, one more than Andre Lacroix produced for San Diego last season.

Gordie Howe scored one goal and assisted on two others for Houston, finishing the season with 102 points.

WHEN'S THE LAST TIME YOU HEARD A SALESMAN TALK ABOUT SAFETY?

You'll hear a lot of gushing about gas economy. And expansive talk about smaller-size cars. But rarely will you hear the man who's trying to sell you, tell you what happened when his car was test-crashed into a barrier.

But in our showroom, you will.

Our people sell Volvos and their living is based in good measure on explaining to people like yourself the protection built into every Volvo they show you.

So your salesman will explain why Volvos come with four—not two—power disc brakes. And how the two independent braking circuits each work on a total of three wheels. He'll tell you the roof pillars have supported a weight of seven tons. (Turn that over in your mind.) And why the front and rear ends are designed to crumple rather than remain inflexible under heavy impact.

He'll even point out a little thing like the defoggers/defrosters that help clear the front side windows. Because when you have traffic thundering to the right and the left of you, it isn't a little thing.

So whether you come in to inspect the luxurious new Volvo 260 series or one of the new 240s, he has a lot of explaining to do. And it won't hurt you to listen.

Pro-Amateur Battles Highlight First Round

Medalist Fred Worthington has been drawn against Nanaimo's Ron Bell but a trio of amateur - professional matchups may rate as the feature battle in the first round of the Vancouver Island Open golf tournament.

The 32 qualifiers for the match-play aspect of the annual tournament launch the head-to-head confrontation Sunday at Victoria Golf Club.

Worthington, 30-year-old Cedar Hill club captain, won medal honors last Sunday by posting the only sub-par performance — a one-under 69 — at Uplands.

Colwood pro Bob Hogarth, runnerup medallist with a 70 when he took a disastrous, three-over-par seven on the final hole in the qualifying round, meets Uplands amateur Mike Gray.

PHILLY SALES TOP MILLION

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The baseball season hasn't opened yet but Philadelphia Phillies have already sold more than one million tickets for the season.

Bill Giles, the Phillies' executive vice-president, says he is hoping for a 2.5-million attendance total this year at Veterans Stadium.

Last season, the Phils drew a club record 1.9 million fans.

Esquimalt Holds Share of Lead In Forces Event

Four teams are deadlocked in first place with 4-2 records following the opening day of play in the six-team, round-robin Canadian Forces men's volleyball championships tournament at CFB Esquimalt.

Tied for first place are Pacific (Esquimalt), Ontario (Borden), Quebec (Valcartier) and Prairie (Calgary) while CFB Europe has a 2-4 record and Atlantic (Gagetown) is 0-6.

The top four teams after today's play will advance to the single-loss elimination championship round Thursday.

The Gals Are Closing In

LONDON (AP) — Women athletes are steadily closing in on men's track times, an Australian genetics specialist says, and while women are catching up to men everywhere, they're making better progress in East Germany than any place else.

Dr. K. F. Dyer, of the department of genetics at the University of Adelaide, tracked the progress of women athletes in an article in the Journal of Biosocial Science, published at Cambridge, England. He claimed women's improved performances result from social factors such as differing degrees of encouragement and differing levels of expectation.

He made no attempt to analyze the social conditions that have made East Germany a leading power in sport. But he showed by statistics that East German women are making the fastest comparative advance on men's times both in track and field and in swimming.

Dyer took men's and women's national track records, in races from 100 metres to 3000 metres and the 400- and 1600-metre relays, in 15 different countries. He computed the percentage difference between men's and women's times and produced this tabulation:

East Germany, 11.98 per cent; Soviet Union, 12.55; The Netherlands, 13.01; Hungary, 13.36; Poland, 13.38; West Germany, 13.79; Britain, 13.83, and Sweden, 13.95.

He calculated similar percentage differences between men's and women's world records to show how the gap is shrinking:

- 100 metres—11.83 per cent in 1954, 9.89 in 1974.
- 400 metres—26.11 in 1954, 16.44 in 1974.
- 800 metres—19.42 in 1954, 11.40 in 1974.
- 1500 metres—19.06 in 1954, 13.76 in 1974.

In swimming, Dyer produced percentage differences between men's and women's world records in 1955, 1965 and 1975 to demonstrate the diminishing gap between the sexes:

- 100 metres—16.79, 11.34, 11.21.
- 200 metres—14.83, 11.90, 10.10.

East Germany had the smallest percentage differences between men's and women's national swimming records, 7.1 per cent, followed by Italy, 7.63; Australia, 7.90; United States, 9.79; The Netherlands, 9.83, and Canada, 10.99.

Dyer predicted the gap will continue to grow smaller, both in track and field and swimming, but he did not forecast that women athletes and swimmers will ever match men's times.

DOLPHINS WANT CSONKA BUT BALK AT DEMANDS

MIAMI (AP) — Miami Dolphins owner Joe Robbie made public Tuesday his opposition to a five-year contract being sought from his National Football League team by Larry Csonka, claiming the former Dolphin fullback wants a financial package totalling more than $2 million.

Robbie said the Dolphins have put off meeting with Csonka and his agent, but "remain open to future negotiations based upon our salary structure."

Talking about a proposed pact submitted by Csonka's agent, Ed Keating, Robbie said: "We have too much respect for our players and our fans to agree.

"Coach (Don) Shula and I would like to sign Larry to return to Miami if we can sign him at a salary consistent with the salary structure of the Miami Dolphins, which is the best in professional football. But Mr. Keating's proposal does not provide the basis for constructive negotiations."

Among Csonka's proposals listed by Robbie were a salary of $250,000 a year, a $50,000 cash bonus for signing, an annual cash bonus of $15,000 and a 20-year loan of $125,000 at minimum legal interest.

Among other fringe benefits sought by Csonka were airline and game tickets and a scouting and coaching job after retirement.

Csonka's ball carrying helped lead the Dolphins to three consecutive Super Bowl appearances in 1973, 1974 and 1975. Last season he jumped to the now-defunct World Football League with teammates Paul Warfield and Jim Kiick.

Warfield Signs With Cleveland

CLEVELAND (AP) — Paul Warfield, once traded away by Cleveland Browns, has signed a contract with the National Football League club, owner Art Modell said today.

The wide receiver, a graduate of Ohio State in 1964, began setting team records when the Browns drafted him that year. But in 1970, he was traded to Miami Dolphins so the Browns could use Miami's selection in the college draft. That pick gave the Browns quarterback Mike Phipps of Purdue.

Last year, Warfield was part of a $3.5-million package deal with millionaire John Bassett Jr. of Toronto that brought team-mates Larry Csonka and running back Jim Kiick to the World Football League for Memphis Southmen.

They played only part of one year before the league went under financially. The players were released from personal service contracts only a few weeks ago, after Bassett's bid for an NFL franchise was turned down.

The Browns are still negotiating with Csonka, a fullback, but are expected to choose a big running back in their first-round pick in the college draft Thursday because Csonka has said he isn't ready to sign with anyone yet.

Fight Widow Receives $25,000

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — The widow of American boxer Chuck Wilburn will get $25,000 compensation following the death of her husband Tuesday from injuries received in a fight here April 1.

Wilburn's three-year-old daughter will get a weekly payment of $13.75 until she turns 16.

The manager of the club which staged the 10-round bout in which Wilburn suffered the head injury that caused his death six days later, confirmed the payments would be made under the workers compensation laws of the state of New South Wales.

Canadians Lose

KRAKOW, Poland (Reuter) — Poland beat Canada 85-59 in an international women's basketball tournament match Tuesday. Poland led 45-25 at the half. Sheila Strike of Vancouver and Pat Tatham of Kitchener, Ont., led the Canadian girls with nine points each.

Liverpool A Threat

LONDON (Reuter) — A home victory over Leicester restored Liverpool to joint leadership of the English League soccer standings but still behind Queen's Park Rangers on goal average.

Kevin Keegan and John Toshack carved out the only goal 10 minutes into the second half.

This was Liverpool's fifth successive league win without conceding a goal. But three of Liverpool's final four matches are away from home and none of the top four clubs is giving much away.

Killanin Is 'Convinced'

PARIS (AP) — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, said Tuesday he is completely convinced for the first time that the 1976 Summer Olympic Games will open on schedule and without problems in Montreal on July 17.

"I am now absolutely convinced that all sports will take place in the areas where they are planned according to schedule," Killanin told a news conference.

His statement came after meetings with Victor Goldbloom, he Quebec provincial minister who is in charge of the construction sites in Montreal where strikes and delays threatened the postponement of the Games.

"There was a moment," Killanin said, "when I had considerable worries about the Games. That was in October. Then I saw Dr. Goldbloom in Innsbruck at the Winter Games and there was still some concern about the track and swimming events. Now we are confident that all is well in hand."

Killanin said that after the troubles surrounding the construction of the Games' facilities he was convinced "the team is working excellently together; I'm fully optimistic."

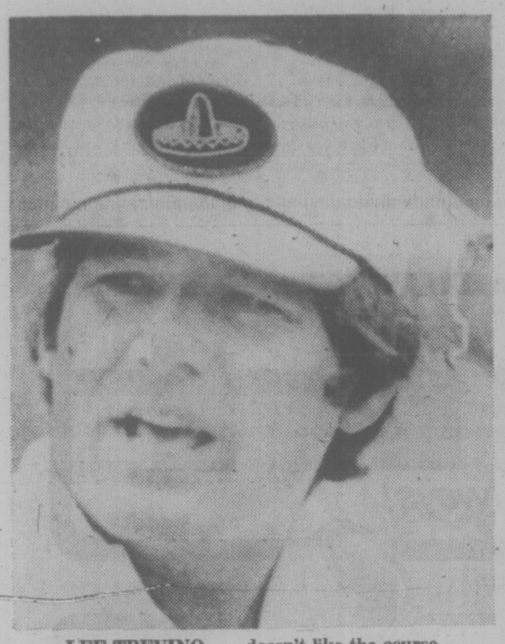
If It Rains at Augusta, Watch Out for Lee



LEE TREVINO . . . doesn't like the course

AUGUSTA, Ga. — "Let's get it straight. I don't like the Augusta course, I've never liked it and I never will," said Lee Trevino Tuesday. "The only reason I'm playing in the Masters is that I won the PGA Championship in 1974 and that gave me three major titles.

"I've won the U.S. Open and the British Open twice each, and the PGA. So all I need is the Masters. That's my new goal. I want to join Gene Sarazen, Ben Hogan, Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player as the only guys who ever won all four. I want to leave my mark."

Trevino says he's tired of being asked why he doesn't like the Masters. "It's like that Czech tennis player who defected (Martina Navratilova)," he said. "I read where she said that she's told why she defected a thousand times and still it keeps coming up.

"I hit the ball low. Augusta demands you hit the ball high. Some of my best friends are here; the tournament is the best run, galleries the most courteous. But it's not for me."

Coming from anybody else, it would be blasphemy to rap the Masters, considered to be golf's holy of holies. Only the great ones earn their way and the field is small enough so the normal distractions of slow play and huge fields don't apply.

"The course favors a hooker — and you know the kind I mean, a guy who can draw the ball. I can't. I have a flat swing and my game simply isn't suited to a course where the premium is keeping the ball high and hooking."

Tevino was reminded that Jimmy Demaret, who won the Masters three times (1940, 1947, 1950) faded the ball. "Yeah," said Trevino, "that's right. But when he played, he didn't have three cats like Jack Nicklaus, Tom Weiskopf and Johnny Miller in the field. Look it up — every Master winner of the last 10 years hooked the ball."

Trevino says flatly that the only way he can win the Masters is if it rains. "The conditions have to be perfect for me," he added: "I'm the guy who can stop the ball on wet greens better than anybody else in the game.

"I'm the longest hitter in golf but I won the 1968 U.S. Open at Oak Hill (Rochester, N.Y.) and the PGA at Tanglewood (Winston-Salem, N.C.) in 1974. Both courses were like the Masters but with one difference. It rained a lot during both tournaments and I was able to stop the ball. If I catch a wet course, I'm dangerous. I can throw that ball up there if it's wet."

Trevino says the secret to winning the Masters is conquering the par-fives. "They killed me last year," he explained. "Weiskopf tells me you can't attack the par-fives here. I was one over par for my four rounds here last year on the 16 par-fives I played. "Weiskopf finished a stroke behind Nicklaus and was six under par for those holes. All right — Jack (Nicklaus) was 12 under for the par-fives. See what I mean? That was the tournament. I finished tied for 10th at 286 last year, 10 strokes behind Nicklaus."

Trevino thinks the revamped, par-five 13th hole will make a big difference here this year. "They've moved the tee back so you don't get a clear shot to the green," he explained. "Youre not going to see those guys getting on the green in two and going for their eagles. They're not gonna go for the green on the second shot and yol're going to see bigger numbers on that hole."

Last year, the field played the 13th hole in 46 under par, the lowest total of all the long holes.

Trevino revealed he has sent home (Santa Teresa, N.M.) for his old set of irons. "They should be here by the time play starts Thursday," he said. "I've discovered that my six-iron is catching on the heel of the club and I can't control the ball. The old set is stainless steel. I don't like stainless steel irons but I think I can control them better.

"I'll give it a shot because I really want to win. I'm hitting the ball 40 yards higher now than I used to." What about lighting? Trevino was struck by lightning playing in the Western Open in Chicago last summer.

"Man, if there's lightning," he said, "they're gonna have to do without me."

Romanian Wins

ATHENS (AP) — Romanian Mircea Damian had little difficulty Tuesday in winning the Panhellenic championship marathon run in two hours, 27 minutes, 33.4 seconds.

Spain's Antonino Banos Alonso took second in 2:31:19.8, edging out Greece's Nicholas Argyropoulos who was 22 seconds behind.

ERVING AGAIN VOTED TOP PLAYER IN ABA

ST. LOUIS (AP) — For the third consecutive year, Julius Erving of New York Nets has been selected American Basketball Association player of the year in a poll conducted by the Sporting News. The six-foot-six forward received every possible vote at his position.

David Thompson of Denver Nuggets also received every vote possible to be the rookie of the year.

Besides Erving those named to the first team by a vote of 77 ABA players were: Billy Knight, Indiana; Artis Gilmore, Kentucky; James Silas, San Antonio, and Ralph Simpson, Denver.

Giant Owner Would Sell At a Profit

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Bud Herseth, the Phoenix meat packer who last month purchased a half-interest in San Francisco Giants for $4 million, denied Tuesday he is actively seeking to sell his part of the National League baseball team.

"I won't say my interest isn't for sale," said Herseth. "Everything I've got is for sale. But I'm not trying to sell at this time."

Herseth was commenting on published reports that he wanted to sell his interest for $4 million. He did not deny the reports but said they were taken out of context.

But Herseth added that if he did sell, "it wouldn't be for exactly what I paid."

"That's not the way I do business. The idea is to sell at a profit."

Geiberger Moves Up

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Al Geiberger's win in the Greensboro Open last weekend, worth $46,000, moved him into seventh place in the United States golf tour earnings with a total of $68,085, the Professional Golfers' Association announced Monday.

Baseball Clinic Slated Sunday

Wayne Norton, co-ordinator of coaching development for the B.C. Amateur Baseball Association, has scheduled another clinic for Sunday starting at 10 a.m. in the Work Point gymnasium.

Approximately 68 people turned out for the first six-hour session last Sunday. Although the clinics are designed mainly for Little League coaches and potential coaches, they are open to everyone.

Norton, a former national team coach, will be assisted by ex-national players Dave Graas, Don Cowan and Rick Mark.

To add a little realism Sunday, Norton will conduct a two-hour drill among 15 Little League players.

OTTAWA — Car 53, where were you between Aug. 19 and Sept. 3 last year?

But why did it take so long to get there — and who, besides Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson, was aboard?

That trip is one of a series of mysterious journeys made by cabinet ministers and other unknown passengers aboard two luxury private railway cars on loan to the Canadian government from Canadian National Railways, between April 1, 1974, and March 1 of this year.

The private coaches are known as Car 5 and Car 53 "Northwind."

Transport Minister Otto Lang tabled in the Commons Tuesday a written answer to a question from Tom Cossitt (PC—Leeds) asking for details of the use of private railway cars by the government.

The details were few.

Though Cossitt asked for information as far back as April 20, 1968 — the date on which Pierre Trudeau was sworn in as prime minister — Lang could only find information after April 1, 1974.

Since then, he reported, Car 5 travelled 25,269 miles and Car 53 logged 28,894 miles, at a total cost of $150,000.

In all but two instances recorded the cars were used by cabinet ministers, he said.

But the purpose of each trip, he reported, is "unknown."

A list of the other passengers aboard with the ministers is "not available."

However, it appears that many of the leisurely journeys were made from Ottawa to the home towns of the ministers concerned.

There is no indication that the ministers returned to the capital aboard the deluxe coaches, and it seems possible that they made the return trip empty.

Some of the trips — like Danson's to Vancouver — seem to have taken an unusually long time.

The minister who was the most frequent passenger aboard the two luxuriously-appointed coaches was Andre Ouellet who resigned from his consumer affairs portfolio during the "judges affair" last month.

He made 12 trips in the two cars between September of 1974 and this February — eight of them to Montreal.

Treasury Board President Jean Chretien was runner up with five trips — three of them to his home town, Shawinigan, Que.

Former Finance Minister John Turner made three trips in the luxury coaches during the summers of 1974 and 1975 to Kenora, Ont., in the heart of the Lake-of-the-Woods resort area.

Other ministers recorded as having used the coaches to travel between the capital and their home towns include former Senate Government leader Paul Martin, now high commissioner in London, former Public Works Minister Jean-Eudes Dube, Communications Minister Jeanne Sauve, Immigration Minister Bob Andras and Lang himself.

The two occasions on which the private coaches were used other than by ministers were in December of 1975 during the visit of a railway delegation from the Soviet Union and in June of last year when Canadian Transportation Commission officials used them.

The government also owns a two-coach train set for use by Governor-General Jules Leger.

British Pledge Sought

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday he wants to get the Canadian constitution out of Britain and into Canada before deciding what further steps will be taken.

He told Andrew Brewin (NDP—Greenwood) that he wants the British Parliament to declare that it will no longer have any part in making laws for Canada.

Once that step is taken, a number of others have to be considered, such as redistribution of powers between federal and provincial governments and bringing the language of the 1867 Act up to date.

But those other steps will be decided after the constitution arrives in Canada.

"I don't want to complicate the present proposed method," he said.

Sliding Past The Issues

OTTAWA (CP) — An elaborate triple-screen slide show designed to illustrate how the transport department plans to spend more than $1 billion this year provoked an opposition outcry Tuesday in the Commons transport committee.

"The snow jobs get snowier every year," said New Democrat Les Benjamin (Regina-Lake Centre) as he entered the darkened committee room which had been hastily equipped with three screens, four projectors and sound amplifiers.

"Another con job," added Conservative James McGrath (St. John's East).

"The important thing as far as we're concerned is to get into the estimates and ask questions rather than watch slides," said fellow Conservative Jack Murta (Lisgar).

Transport Minister Otto Lang tried to soothe the uproar, saying the slides were for the edification of MPs. He thought they would rather watch slides than watch him.

With some grumbling, MPs agreed the lights were again dimmed, the projectors turned on.

Seconds after the show began, however, the sound system gave out. The show was supposed to last 40 minutes.

"This is a colossal waste of time," said Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot) as department technicians scurried to fix the problem.

"Apparently something has gone wrong with the picture show. Let's get down to work."

Chairman John Campbell (L—Montreal LaSalle-Emard-Cote Saint-Paul) eventually agreed, saying: "If we have time we can come back to this."

Eventually, it appeared that all was set to go.

But time ran out, and the committee agreed to have another go at the show during its next meeting later this week.

CBC Irks MPs

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons unanimoulsly approved a motion Tuesday expressing "profound displeasure" at the CBC for its coverage of the death Monday of Montreal brain surgeon Dr. Wilder Penfield.

New Democrat Leader Ed Broadbent, who moved the motion, said the CBC devoted "considerably more" time to reporting the death the same day of billionaire American recluse Howard Hughes.

MPs in all parties applauded when Broadbent rose at the beginning of the daily Commons sitting and read his motion.

'Blackmail' Over French Bases

OTTAWA (CP) — A Conservative MP exploded with charges of blackmail Tuesday after hearing Defence Minister James Richardson suggest that an air base in Nova Scotia might be closed as an alternative to establishing a French-language unit there.

"I was absolutely appalled when the minister inferred that perhaps government policy regarding the establishment of French-language units across the country will depend on the blackmailing of members who have bases in their ridings," said Pat Nowlan (PC—Annapolis Valley).

Earlier, Richardson had told Nowlan that Gen. J. A. Destraze, chief of defence staff, had stated department policy recently when he expressed determination to establish a French-language long-range patrol aircraft unit at Greenwood, N.S.

Greenwood is in Nowlan's constituency and he has protested the military's plans to establish the unit.

There also has been strong opposition in the area.

Mr. Richardson was responding in the Commons to questions from Mr. Nowlan about a statement made last week in Middleton, N.S., by External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen that the cabinet has not yet decided to locate the French-language unit at Greenwood.

Richardson said that no formal decision has been made but that Gen. Dextraze had been expressing the department's views.

Mr. Nowlan asked the minister to provide more information on present and future French-language units. Richardson said there are other bases that "would be pleased to have a French-language unit, perhaps we'll have to close down Greenwood."

Nowlan said the minister's statement shocked him.

He asked how MPs were to ask serious questions about a highly-sensitive issue without being blackmailed with the threat of bases in their areas being closed.

He said the shroud of secrecy over the government's bilingualism policy should be lifted and that the minister's remarks pollute the atmosphere and should be withdrawn.

Mass Shots Urged

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The Canadian government is following a "wrong procedure" when it separates the population by age groups for vaccination against swine influenza, according to Dr. P. B. Rynard the official opposition's health critic.

There should be a mass immunization program such as will be carried out in the United States, Rynard said Tuesday.

Dr. Jonas Salk who developed the polio vaccine, has declared there is a need for mass vaccination to prevent flu spreading into an epidemic, he added.

Rynard said the spread of flue virus cannot be controlled effectively if two or three in a household are vaccinated and there are one to two who not vaccinated.

Those people will bring the disease into the home and give it to those already vaccinated if the virus is strong enough, according to the doctor.

He described the swine flu, which has world health authorities concerned, as an acute respiratory infection affecting up to 40 per cent or more of the population with headaches, aches and pains generally in the same area as with other flu viruses.

It can swing from the respiratory field to the gastro-intestinal field by mutation.

"It will keep some individuals away from work for a month or more. If the individual develops pneumonia it is a bacterial pneumonia or a bronchial pneumonia which can be cleared up with antibiotics.

"The individual can get a pneumonia which can last from one to two months," said Rynard.

Top Court Hearing On AIB

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada will hear arguments on the constitutional validity of the Anti-Inflation Act on May 31, a court spokesman said Tuesday.

Justice Minister Ron Basford asked the court March 11 to give its opinion on the legislation's validity. This was after a group of Ontario teachers initiated a lower-court challenge to the validity of an anti-inflation agreement signed between Ontario and the federal government.

The agreement gave the federal Anti-Inflation Board authority to decide what wage increases for Ontario public employees are acceptable under the controls program imposed last Oct. 13.

The teachers' challenge is based on the fact that Ontario signed the agreement under authority of a cabinet order-in-council rather than by passing legislation.

The teachers argue the agreement effectively nullifies existing provincial legislation, an action they say can only be taken by passing new provincial legislation.

The Supreme Court of Canada spokesman said Tuesday that those wishing to intervene in the hearing have until April 15 to give notice.

Already, eight labor groups including the two-million-member Canadian Labor Congress, which opposes the controls program, have been given the right to present arguments before the high court on the review.

In addition, five provinces — Ontario, British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba — have had their applications to appear as intervenors approved by the court.

Flying Doctor's Wings Clipped

By BARRY WHEELER

CANBERRA (Reuter) — Australia's Flying Doctor Service may have its wings clipped because of a financial crisis.

The hardy aircraft which have bumped and bounced their way across Australia for a decade or more serving patients in remote areas are wearing badly after thousands of landings on crude, rubble-strewn airstrips— and money is not available to replace them.

Brian Hockings, Queensland manager of the service, said the situation is critical.

"We may be forced to run at a loss this year for the first time since we were founded in 1928," he said.

The service needs 20 new light aircraft for operations across Australia, at a total cost of $4 million. "We should get $500,000 from selling off the old ones, but I've no idea where we are going to get the rest of the money."

One option being considered is a direct appeal to the public. The system of financial management comprises a combination of state and federal government subsidies, donations, investments and legacies.

Its budget last year was $2.5 million, of which $700,000 c a m e from government sources. A record 94,650 patients were treated last year.

Government subsidies can be expected to give little help towards replacing the planes. The Australian government may be required to give as little as $20,000 towards the cost of each $200,000 plane, leaving the Flying Doctor Service to find the rest of the money itself.

The problem is limited to operational and capital expenditure, rather than wage demands. The flying doctors themselves draw about 20 per cent less than their urban colleagues.

Tim O'Leary, medical superintendent of the Queensland section of the service, said being a Flying Doctor "must be about the world's most uncomfortable job."

"But then people talk of dedication and I don't believe in dedication. I think a bloke does a job because it suits him."

It's a job that may involve dropping a twin-engined plane on a rutted clearing in the middle of the bush after dark with only old milk tins filled with burning kerosene to mark the approach.

Federal-Provincial Financing All Up in the Air

By MARGARET PITON
Times News Services

OTTAWA — The whole gamut of federal-provincial financial arrangements appears to be up in the air following last week's federal-provincial finance ministers meeting. Although nothing was resolved at that meeting, it appears that there wil be substantial moves toward further decentralization of government financing in the near future.

The basic problem with decentralization is that it makes it more difficult for the federal government to manage the economy. Canada's government spending and taxing, the major instruments of fiscal policy, are already very decentralized.

As early as 1968 provincial and municipal governments spent over half the money spent by governments in Canada, their public debt was higher than that of the federal government, and they and their crown corporations accounted for 80 per cent of the public investment in Canada.

At that time Jacques Parizeau, a Quebec economist, said the sitation was so decentralized that "the possible efficiency of economic policies and their coherence must be questioned."

From the point of view of economic management, all these numbers have worsened in recent years. Now provincial and municipal governments spend about 60 per cent of all government money, their debt has increased relative to the federal debt, as has their percentage of total public investment.

If, as seems certain, the feds leave more and more spending and taxing power to the provinces, they will further weaken their ability to control the economy. In addition, if a numer of provinces succeed in opting out of many of the shared-cost welfare programs, the ideal of a similar minimum level of social services across the country will come to an end.

In terms of economic management this is likely to mean more and more reliance by the federal government on rather blunt instruments, such as monetary policy and wage and price controls.

There has already been some evidence that provincial economic policies are causing some problems at the federal level. In his recent annual report, Bank of Canada governor Gerald Bouey warned that the Bank would not intervene to halt changes in interest or exchange rates caused by high provincial borrowing.

It seems strange that at a time when the federal government is exercising an unprecedented amount of control over the economy through the anti-inflation program, it is considering giving up more power to the provinces.

Admittedly the feds won't give up on policies such as the shared-cost programs without a struggle. But by putting a ceiling on federal contributions to these programs they are making it much more attractive for the provinces to go their own way.

Changes in the equalization payments formula and an end to the revenue guarantee are other measures which arouse the ire of provincial politicians, and will make them more open to suggestions that a radical restructuring of the total structure is needed.

The feds are indeed in a bind, caught with ever-increasing payments to provinces at a time when they themselves are trying to restrict their spending increases. They apparently think their proposals are the only way possible to stem the tide of an increased bite by the provinces out of the federal treasury.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald has agreed that the transfer of more fiscal authority to the provinces will make the job of economic management even more difficult than it currently is. The government apparently feels the benefits of the cutbacks outweigh the loss of control over provincial spending.

Soviet Spy Bared

BELGRADE (WP) — A Soviet citizen has been arrested in Yugoslavia on espionage charges in what well-informed sources describe as clear-cut evidence of ties between Russian representatives here and various clandestine groups opposing President Tito's government.

The alleged Soviet spy was described as a woman in her early 30s who was said to have acted as a contact between the Soviet consulate general in Zagreb, Yugoslavia's second largest city, and dissident political groups.

Her name and the job she held in Zagreb was not revealed but the sources said she did not enjoy diplomatic immunity.

Three Yugoslav citizens were also arrtsted in connection with the case.

All arrests coincided with the sudden departure from Zagreb of Soviet Consul General Yuri Sepreltv, who was ostensibly reassigned home.

The woman's arrest more than a month ago is the first known case of a Soviet citizen ever jailed on espionage charges here.

The Zagreb affair reflects continued intensive Soviet intelligence activities in this country despite public assurances issued by Moscow last December that the Soviet Union does not support Stalinist Yugoslav emigres living in Soviet bloc countries and "various conspiratorial and sectarian groups" inside Yugoslavia.

It is particularly annoying to Yugoslavs that such activity is taking place in Zagreb, the capital of Croatia, where the Russians are said to be maintaining ties with both pro-Soviet elements and with certain Croatian separatist groups.

According to knowledgeable sources, the thrust of covert Soviet activities centres on several regions in this multinational country and on possible destabilizing forces that could become active once President Tito leaves the political stage.

Tito, who will be 84 next month, has been the unchallenged master of Yugoslavia for the past three decades. But although he enjoys good health, the time of his passing may not be too distant.

The existence of cominformists, as the pro-Soviet elements here are called, and the chronic problem of Croatian nationalism with pronounced separatist tendencies among a relatively small extreme nationalist section of Croatia's population are regarded as tht key problems of post-Tito Yugoslavia.

In an effort to prepare itself for a possible crisis, the government two years ago mounted a major police campaign against political dissent. Thus far more than 200 cominformists, Croatian nationalists and Albanian separatists have been arrested and given long prison sentences.

At the same time, police have also hit liberal intellectuals critical of the Tito government.

Yet, the pro-Soviet groups here are regarded as potentially most dangerous. During the past two years police have discovered a number of clandestine pro-Soviet organizations, including the existence of an illegal Communist Party whose activities were directly linked to anti-Tito emigres living in the Soviet Union and in Czechoslovakia.

Uranium Demand

VIENNA (Reuter) — World uranium requirements will increase by almost 400 per cent in the next 15 years according to the International Atomic Energy Agency. It said world demand for uranium will reach almost 600,000 short tons a year by the year 2000.

The Bridge Expert

A few weeks ago, in perusing through my files of bridge deals, I came across a deal that I had not seen for more than two decades. When it arose originally, it fascinated me — and that fascination still persists. I hope the reader will see it in the same light.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♣	2 ◇	2 ♡
4 ♠	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
Redbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Eight of ♡.

As can be observed, the bidding was quite aggressive, with West and North each making first-round bids on submarginal values. East, on the other hand, was quite conservative — a sounder bidder might well have bid five clubs somewhere along the line. This latter contract was there for the taking, with West's only losers being two trump tricks to South's ace and king.

Where West found his double of the four-spade contract, I do not know, but South cannot be faulted for his redouble, especially after North had made a free bid of two diamonds.

West's eight of hearts opening lead was taken by East's queen, after which the ace of hearts was cashed. Next came the king of hearts, and West had to make a discard.

If it were possible to survey all of the millions of players in the world, and ask them what they would discard on the king of hearts, I would guess that at least 80 per cent of them would say a club. And they would be very wrong.

Had West discarded a club, East, at trick four, surely would have led a diamond or a club. And whichever he led, South would win, draw trumps in three rounds, and claim his contract. But, on the third heart lead, West tossed away his ace of diamonds.

To trick four East naturally led a diamond — and no matter what South played, he had to lose a trump trick to West. If he ruffed with, let us say, the ten of spades, West would overruff with the jack. And if, instead, South elected to trump with the spade king (which he did at the table, hoping for a 2-1 division of the three outstanding trumps), West would discard a club.

West, with the J-9-3 of trumps still remaining, now couldn't be prevented from winning a trump trick. At the table, South next led the spade eight, West covered with the nine — and eventually West's jack took the setting trick.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, April 8

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Many "good things" occur — some persons try to throw a wet blanket over encouraging news, events. Key is to maintain balance, to heed your own counsel. Love is very much in picture, too. You're due for more recognition—and money.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You can expand now—make new contacts, stress originality and independence. Permit creative urge to find outlet. Means go beyond what appears to be a barrier. Your feelings can be synthesized, articulated. Know it and act like you are aware of it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Follow through on ideas — share knowledge. Learn by teaching — deal with Aquarian who is willing to "take a chance." What seemed an obstacle could boomerang in your favor. Partner or mate will come over to your point of view.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Refuse to sell yourself short. Get money's worth—and count your change. Emphasis on wish fulfillment, possessions, the purchases you make and the sales, too. Gemini, Sagittarius could be in picture. Member of opposite sex may ask too much, too soon. Be mature!

LEO (July2 3-Aug. 22): Lunar cycle is high — get going on new project. One "at top" will aid, even though current indications point in opposite direction. Be aware of basics. Do homework. Someone may want to surprise or embarrass you. Remain on your toes. You are going to win.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be analytical — take nothing for granted. Look behind scenes. Open lines of communication. Be aware of property values. You may be asked to represent special group, club. Be confident, especially if appearing before media.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Make room for charming person who may not agree with all of your views. Be diplomatic. Friends may have dispute. Don't get drawn in middle. Be neutral without giving up all of your fire, conviction. Key is to understand that loved ones do not always know their own minds—or hearts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You need additional material, support. Key is to avoid promising more than can be delivered. Pisces, Virgo persons figure prominently. Accent is on standing in community, advancement, ambition, legal ramifications.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be willing to accept responsibility — in business and love. You get nothing for nothing. Special communications could cause change of plans — and this does include travel. Capricorn, Libra and Cancer are likely to be in picture.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Enthusiasm returns. Personal magnetism surfaces. You have wider appeal. You gain better chance for distribution, display. Aries, Libra could be in picture. Accent on money as it affects partnership, marriage. You are able to complete important project.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be aware of security, long-range goals. Don't rush, push or force a deadline. Time is on your side. Those who seem to oppose you can have change of heart. Emphasis on co-operative efforts, legal ties and emotional commitments.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Follow through on teaching procedures. Means others are apt to be attentive, receptive. Aquarian could play significant role. Give attention to work, health, services, ways to improve basic techniques. Neighbor or relative provides impetus for profitable project.

IF APRIL 8 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are able to organize, to create, to instill confidence in others, to run a business and to transform losing proposition into something that pays dividends. You also are insistent on having your own way; you are intense, temperamental and passionate. Capricorn, Cancer persons play important roles in your life. September could be your most significant month of 1976.

FRENCH TROTTER WINS

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — Favored Bellino II, a nine-year-old French trotter, won the $60,000 Agnano International Trot in record time Sunday.

Two Mining Unions Fail to Heal Split

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Federation of Labor has failed in its attempts to create a common front between the United Steelworkers of America and the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechaincal and Allied Workers (CAIMAW), a union official said Tuesday.

Jess Succamore of CAIMAW said: "The Steelworkers have basically scabbed on us," adding they apparently will continue to cross CAIMAW picket lines.

Succamore said the two unions could reach no agreement at a meeting in Kamloops Monday.

The meeting was called by Len Guy, secretary-treasurer of the federation, when members of the Steelworkers' Union crossed CAIMAW picket lines at three mines in the B.C. interior.

The Steelworkers are an affiliate of the federation while rival CAIMAW is not.

Succamore said Steelworkers officials offered to respect CAIMAW pickets after picketing had been carried on two days a week over the next six weeks at locations where the lines were extended.

He said the Steelworkers also stipulated that all litigation between CAIMAW and the employers be resolved in CAIMAW's favor.

"They (Steelworker officials) were playing games," said Succamore. "They're going to cross legal picket lines after putting down conditions that are impossible to meet.

"They're saying: 'Oh Lord, make us good but not yet.'"

He said the right to extend picketing has been rejected by the Steelworkers by their refusal to recognize CAIMAW pickets.

CAIMAW members currently are on strike at Noranda's Bell Copper Mine near Granisle, northeast of Smithers, and at Canex Placer's Gibraltar Copper Mine near Williams Lake.

Succamore said the main issue in the current dispute centres around Canex Placer's refusal to grant the union seniority concessions it already has allowed in contracts at other mines.

He said pickets were extended March 19 to three mines where the Steelworkers are certified — the Craigmont Mine controlled by Canex Placer at Merritt, Noranda's Brenda Mine at Peachland and Boss Mountain Mine in the Cariboo. Noranda has a 19.7 per cent interest in Craigmont Mines Ltd.

CAIMAW also picketed two of its own certifications owned by Canex Placer and Noranda; the Endake Mine at Fraser Lake and Noranda Metal Industries on Annacis Island near New Westminster.

Succamore said the steelworkers were advised that expanded picketing at these locations would take place March 19 and CAIMAW intended to picket them no more than once a week.

"It's our understanding that at some of the locations Steelworkers officials actually told the men that our strike was illegal and that if their men refused to cross picket lines and then were suspended by the company, the union wouldn't support them," said Succamore.

COURT ACTION ON SHIP FIRING

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two seamen have begun court action against the captain of the Northland Prince following the firing of 20 crew members in Bella Coola Sunday.

Dave McGarvey, 49, of Kingcome Navigation and Marko Makar, 41, of Rivtow Straits Towing said Tuesday that although they were not involved in the incident, they took the action as concerned seamen.

They have filed charges against Captain Henry Hall for wilfully and intentionally endangering the lives of the 51 passengers on board the Northland Prince by sailing the vessel grossly understaffed.

The 20 crew members walked off the ship when they were told that a crew member with the flu would not be isolated, a procedure they claim is provided for in their contract.

The ship then sailed with a crew of 17.

McGarvey said he was appalled when he saw 31 children get off the Northland Navigation-owned ship when it docked Monday in Vancouver.

Meanwhile, a civilian picket line at Northland Navigation has been lifted and a spokesman for the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers Union said talks were continuing with the company about the action. The spokesman said he is optimistic the 20 crew members will be reinstated with no loss in pay.

The federal Transport Ministry also is investigating the incident.

Community Shot Clinic Opening

A new community health office on McKenzie just east of Shelbourne will offer an adult immunization clinic from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. each Monday.

Residents of Gordon head, Cedar Hill, Cordova Bay and Cadboro Bay areas requiring immunization, particularly those travelling overseas, are asked to phone the health office at 477-0186 for an appointment.

Meeting on Holdups

VANCOUVER (CP) — The 35 robberies this year at city financial institutions — a 30-per-cent increase in robberies compared with last year — has prompted a meeting between police and officials from financial institutions.

Sgt. Al Cox, head of the police robbery squad, said Tuesday the meeting is tentatively set for mid-May.

About $75,000 was taken in the 35 holdups and last year about $345,000 was taken in 168 robberies of banks, trust companies and credit unions.

Cox said he will recommend that all banks move toward the central teller system now operating at three Vancouver area banks.

Under the system, tellers must take their transactions to a central desk and no money is kept at individual tills.

Cox said none of the three banks has been robbed since they moved to the system and "it's virtually foolproof against the lone bandit." He said the system does not supply protection against gang robberies but these are rare instances.

"We are plagued here with the lone bandit," said Cox. "Every Tom, Dick or Harry who has guts enough thinks he can walk into a bank and rob it."

The average haul is $2,000 and the largest for a lone bandit this year was $11,500.

Police say the major reason for the increase in holdups this year is that the illicit drug supply in the city is declining, forcing up the costs to addicts. For example, the price of a cap of heroin is about $35 but the quality of the drug reportedly is on a continual decline and the addict must keep increasing the number of caps to satisfy.

Discipline Will Reign

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver school trustees have approved a series of rules stressing obedience and frequent testing for a more-structured elementy school set to open this fall.

The motion, passed unanimously, follows on previous approval in principle by the school board of a plan to meet parental requests and establish a more disciplined school in the city, the site of which is still to be selected.

"Those students who fail to abide by the regulations may be given detentions," the rules specify.

"If the problem persists, after consultation with the parents, the student may be asked to transfer."

The outline also specifies "the competitive approach will be emphasized, with recognition given for high achievement."

It says students will be expected to be courteous and neat and classroom procedures will be regulated and orderly.

Basic skills will be emphasized, with "drills and formal testing an integral part of the program."

"The school will attempt to motivate students towards interest in their work and the development of their individual talents," the rules outline says. "The school will operate on the belief that the wisdom of the adult takes precedence over the inclinations of the child."

Standard tests and report cards will be given while "promotion will be based on the successful attainment of the standards for the grade."

In committee, trustees said they were afraid specifying these rules for the more structured school will imply other Vancouver schools don't follow these broad guidelines. But the trustees said many follow most of these rules.

Faculty Strike?

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Faculty members at Capilano College have voted 81 per cent in favor of strike action. The dispute centres around a college council contract proposal, which calls for an eight-per-cent raise in salaries of fulltime instructors, but with an increase in working hours and an increase in classroom size.

Expansion Opposed

VANCOUVER (CP) — More than 200 persons turned up for a special city council meeting Tuesday to enthusiastically applaude speakers who criticized proposals to expand Vancouver International Airport. Mayor Art Phillips said before the nearly three dozen speakers presented their arguments that council would decide its position on the airport issue at a later meeting. Vancouver planners favor postponing a decision for expansion, which centres on a $20 million third runway.

Next Phase

VANCOUVER (CP) — Plans for the next phase of the city's False Creek development will be prepared by a design team appointed next Tuesday by city council. The team has been given six weeks to prepare a development plan for city-owned land on the south shore of False Creek between Alder Street and the Granville bridge. The land is to the west of the first phase of housing and park development now under construction.

Baker Eruption Unlikely

SEATTLE (AP) — Eruption of volcanic Mount Baker is "not imminent" and popular mountain slope campgrounds closed since last June will be re-opened, government officials said today.

Campgrounds around Baker Lake were closed because scientists, noting a tenfold increase in mountain steam activity, feared that massive mudslides might be triggered at any time. They envisioned walls of snow and mud rumbling onto helpless, doomed campers.

Extensive monitoring of the 10,778-foot mountain activities shows no sign of "any of the geological warning signals usually associated with empending eruptions,'-' said Dr. Richard S. Fiske, Geologist and chief of the geochemistry and geophysics office of the U.S. Geological Survey at Reston, Va.

"We now conclude that an eruption is not imminent and possibly is no more likely than it was before the increased steaming began," Fiske said.

"Because of the lack of evidence that the volcano is building toward an eruption, the chance that a large avalanche or mudflow will be triggered by a steam explosion or some other volcanic event in the near future also seems lessened."

Fiske said despite the lowered probability of catastrophic slides, "the hazard is one that existed prior to March, 1975," when increased steam activity was first noted on the mountain.

If the present level of thermal activity has not increased signficantly by June, he said, the survey will reduce its intensive monitoring program, though periodic visual obersations will continue.

As a consequence, U.S. Forest Service campgrounds and other campsites operated by Puget Sound Power and Light Co. will be reopened, officials said.

Seismic, Till, gas and water monitoring have been carried out on the mountain since last summer. Closure of the campgrounds meant that 100,000 persons who normally used the area had to go elsewhere.

The closure was sharply criticized by residents of nearby Concrete, a town dependent in large part on the Baker Lake tourist trade. Some businessmen estimated the economic loss at 25 per cent.

CIVIL SERVICE CLEARS HENRY

WASHINGTON (WP) — Civil service commission chairman Robert E. Hampton said there is no evidence to support an assertion published in Tuesday's Washington Post that U.S. Secretary of state Henry Kissinger "forced the office of education to hire his brother-in-law, David Maginnes . . ."

In a letter to The Post and a telephone interview Tuesday, Hampton said a civil service investigation of the case produced no evidence linking Kissinger to the hiring of Maginnes.

NO CASKET CUTS COST

WINTER PARK, Fla. (UPI) — John Floren says he has come up with a plan to cut the cost of funerals in half by eliminating the need for a casket.

Floren, a local cemetery and funeral home owner, wants to bury bodies in special fibreglass burial vaults while maintaining the appearance and dignity of traditional funeral services.

As it is now, families buy both a casket and a vault for the funeral service and burial.

"This is going to revolutionize the funeral industry," Floren said Tuesday.

Under his plan, a body is put on a "slumber bed," which is placed in the thin bottom portion of the fibreglass vault.

The reusable catafalque can be quickly assembled or taken apart and from all outward appearances looks like a casket costing $1,500 or $2,000.

With the catafalque in place, the body appears to be in an expensive casket. Following the service, the catafalque is removed and the top portion of the fibreglass vault is fitted over the bed and sealed to the vault bottom. Then it is buried.

"The fibreglass vault offers the same benefit as a casket and a vault," he said.

Last year, the average total cost of funeral, arrangements, burial and lot was about $3,100, Floren said.

By using the catafalque and fibreglass vault instead of a casket and a vault, he said, the average cost could drop to about $1,200.

"Yet the family has all the advantages of a traditional service and a higher quality service than they could have had if they had to buy a casket," he said.

Russian Harassment Disrupts Embassy

MOSCOW (UPI) — American diplomats fear the next step in the back and forth harassment of U.S. and Soviet officials may be serious violence.

"This is no joking matter anymore and I am frankly concerned I or my family may become marked for something serious," said one American assigned to the Moscow Embassy.

The U.S. and Soviet governments, in the latest episode of the harassment controversy, exchanged diplomatic notes Tuesday complaining of attacks on officials.

The Americans protested a series of telephone calls, letters, surveillance of diplomats' movements and two confrontations between Russians and American officials.

It was the fourth U.S. protest in two weeks.

In the most serious incident, the U.S. cultural counselor was stopped by a group of men outside a theatre Monday night, jostled and grabbed by the lapels while the men complained about the latest incidents against Russians in New York.

For their part, the Soviets said the Soviet mission to the United Nations lodged a protest over a weekend demonstration at the mission building in Manhattan.

Last week a shot was fired into the Soviet mission but no one was injured.

The Tass News Agency said a "group of hoodlums" cursed Soviet diplomats and their families outside the mission and attacked a bus carrying Soviet couriers.

Russian-speaking U.S. diplomats in Moscow have received late night telephone calls complaining about the New York violence.

The embassy also received two bomb threats and several diplomats reported menacing-looking men had tailed them around Moscow.

While some diplomats dismissed the incidents, others said they were taking precautions in their movements and making sure of their dependants' whereabouts at all times.

'FRISCO FACES STRIKE

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Labor leaders say they will call San Francisco's first general strike in 42 years if necessary unless the city meets wage demands of 1,710 striking crafts workers.

The crafts workers walkout, which entered its eighth day today, already had put 18,000 persons out of work and closed down trolleys, buses and cable cars. The transportation crisis spread to school busing and was compounded by an unrelated lockout of Yellow Cab drivers.

The San Francisco Labor Council's executive committee voted Tuesday to call for the general strike if necessary to support the demands of craft workers, who include plumbers, electricians, gardeners and streetsweepers.

Sea Floor Touted As Dump

WOODS HOLE, Mass. (AP) — The dark, cold ocean bottom, geologically unchanged for 10 million years, someday may swallow growing piles of radioactive waste from nuclear reactors.

Scientists have been working on the burial of atomic wastes in the sea floor for more than two years and now say the idea looks promising.

"We have not found any information that tells us we ought to stop the study," said Dr. Charles Hollister of the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution. "The concept may be sound, but we don't want to say we have the answer."

The isolated seabed regions being studied—under the north central Pacific and the north central Atlantic—were not affected by the last ice age, 10,000 to 25,000 years ago, Hollister said.

There is no evidence of environmental change for the last 10 million years and it may be possible to determine there will be no change for the next one-half million years, he said.

Scientists expect to know enough by 1985 to say whether ocean floor burial of atomic wastes is feasible or not.

Professor Henry Kendall of Massachusetts Institute of Technology said the seabed disposal idea is relatively new, but worth study since some other plans fell apart.

He said there have been leaks of stored radioactive material in New York, Georgia, Kentucky, Colorado, Idaho and Washington.

G. Ross Heath, a University of Rhode Island oceanographer, is researching how fast atomic particles work through samples of sediment taken from the Pacific Ocean floor about 20,000 feet under the surface.

He said one problem is that dangerous atomic wastes for the first 1,000 years or so give off a lot of heat which may affect the sediment. And different types of radioactive material— strontium, cesium or plutonium—decay at different rates.

The senior chemist on the project, Dr. Vaughan Bowen, says it may be closer to 1990 before a final answer on seabed atomic tombs can be given.

Chicken Soup for a Sick Friend

Mary Moore

FOUR O'CLOCK break for cookies with the youngsters when they come home from school is recommended by Mary Moore. "If you move quickly you can save some for the cookie crock," she says.

QUESTION: I'm three years late with this thanks. I had a bad case of flue in February, 1973. My neighbor across the hall is a fan of yours and made some chicken soup you wrote about and brought it to me. I was sick and lonely and it gave me a lift and somehow I got better. I want that soup recipe for I'm retired and I could make it for a sick friend like my neighbor did. I'm sorry to say she has moved.—Noreen D.

ANSWER: You were right about the year and the month, so it was easy to locate the chicken soup you want. Let me know any time I may help.

CREAM OF CHICKEN NOODLE SOUP

4 c. strained chicken broth (fat skimmed off — see below)
½ to ¾ c. diced (¼") carrots
½ c. diced (¼") potatoes
1 tbsp. raw rice
1 tbsp. chopped onion
¾ c. broken fine noodles
1 tbsp. chicken soup base
1 tbsp. corn starch
1 c. milk

Note: If you do not have any chicken broth add four or six teaspoons chicken soup base to 4 cups hot water and use that for your broth.

If you use chicken broth from boiling a chicken, strain and chill it then skim off the hardened fat to use for some other purpose.

Measure the broth into the soup pot and add the carrots, potatoes, rice, onion, noodles and the 1 tablespoon soup base. Cover and cook gently until carrots are tender. Stir the corn starch into the milk until smooth then stir this paste into the soup until thickened a little. Cook 1 minute longer stirring.

Note: If desired, if you have some chicken meat leftover, you could dice it and add as much as 1 cup. This is a thick nourishing delicious soup.

ORANGE DROP COOKIES
(4 dozen)

1 c. shortening—preferably half and half butter and shortening
1 c. sugar
2 eggs
1 large orange-grated rind and juice (see below)
2 c. all-purpose flour
2 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. salt
2 c. bran flakes (packaged cereal)

Cream together shortening and sugar until light. Beat in eggs. Grate rind from 1 large orange and add it. Cut orange in half and squeeze out juice. You need ¼ cup. If you do not have it add water to orange juice to make ¼ cup. Mix together flour, baking powder and salt and add alternately with the orange juice. Stir in bran blakes.

Drop by mounded dessert spoonfuls onto greased cookie sheets at least 2" apart. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. about 12 to 13 minutes until tinged with gold. But be sure to watch them — do not burn even one.

Food Scientists Urged to Give Advice

NEW YORK (AP) — An eminent food scientist has called on his colleagues to speak frankly about the safety of foods that people eat.

They should speak out even if they don't have all the facts nailed down to their own satisfaction, said Dr. Emil Mrak. He acknowledged this is something scientists do not like to do.

Otherwise, he said, public decisions will be influenced by "advocates" who may be biased or acting upon much less-factual information.

Dr. Mrak is chancellor emeritus of the University of California at Davis. He is a microbiologist recognized as a world authority on food preservation. He is currently chairman of the Science Advisory Board of the Environmental Protection Agency.

There is no perfection in knowledge about food safety and there is always some calculated risk, Dr. Mrak told the opening session of a meeting of the American Chemical Society.

"Scientists normally take refuge" in saying there is need "to do more research," rather than point out that some subject involves a calculated risk, he said.

"Advocates, on the other hand, too often speak with certainty, even in the absence of data to substantiate their statements," Dr. Mrak said.

"Scientists should come out from behind their fortress of scientific certainty, and be willing to take the leadership in giving advice based on expert knowledge."

Goldstream Cleanup Set

Spring clean-up of Goldstream Park, including the removal of several potentially dangerous dead trees, will begin shortly.

Along with refurbishing of picnic tables and trails, the general park cleanup will include final touchup of the new Nature House scheduled to open later in the spring.

The house is in the old Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association clubhouse and will serve as headquarters for parks naturalists with displays of local flora and fauna.

TORONTO (CP) — More than 4,000 men, women and teen-agers are members of the St. John Ambulance Brigade in Ontario. Last year they spent more than 405,000 hours on duty, providing free first-aid coverage at public gatherings throughout the province, St. John Ambulance said.

France Tops N. America In Buying Meat, Fish

GENEVA (UPI) — North Americans eat and drink more than anyone else in the world. But when it comes to buying meat and fish for home consumption, France is way ahead.

These and other statistics are contained in a giant volume produced by the International Labor Organization (ILO) on how people around the world spend their money.

The ILO said the statistics, compiled in the early part of the decade, are useful for planners setting down national social and economic policies.

The report shows that North Americans and most northern Europeans spend about a quarter of their food money on meat and fish, while the French devote fully one-third of their food budgets on those items.

Canadians Eat What Americans Won't

By RUTH FREMES and ZAK SABRY

The latest conundrum for Canadians is the U.S. announced decision to ban the food colouring agent, Red No. 2. As a result of recent experiments which link Red No. 2 with cancer, the United States government has ordered the removal of the dye from foods.

The same research data available to the Canadian Health Protection Branch did not convince our officials, and they have allowed it to remain.

Where is the truth? What is Red No. 2? Why is it in our food and in which ones? These are the questions that disturb Canadians.

Perhaps a more serious concern is the concept that allows inadequately tested substances that could be potentially harmful in our foods and withdrawing them only after tests show them to be harmful. Shouldn't they be guilty until proven innocent? Isn't it better to leave these things out of foods until we know they're safe?

Dr. Alexander M. Schmidt, the Commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration in the United States obviously thinks so. His reasoning makes sense. Since the F.D.A. experiments could not establish the dye to be 100 percent safe, and since no other studies are known to be under way that would resolve this issue, he withdrew approval for Red No. 2 until the issue is resolved. Now, the burden of proof rests with the manufacturers. Dr. Schmidt's decision said effectively to the food industry, "prove that Red No. 2 is safe and useful and we'll return it to foods."

In Canada, the Health Protection Branch did not ban it. The official interpretation is that the experimental work was sloppy and so if Canadians want food which is free of Red No. 2, it will be eaten south of the 49th parallel.

Red No. 2, or Amaranth, is a coal tar dye that has been used in food for decades. It's difficult to eat and still avoid it. The Food and Drug Regulations allow it in virtually any food — foods that are red like jelly powders, soft drinks and ice cream, foods that are brown like chocolate pudding, gravy mixes and hot dog casings and foods that are white like icing sugar, cake mixes and puddings all can contain Red No. 2. It makes pallid foods more deeply red, green foods more brown, and white foods, surprisingly enough, more white.

Red No. 2 has been a contentious issue for 20 years. Interest in it stepped up in 1971 when the Soviet Union, after a study which linked it with cancer, banned its use. Testing began then in the United States and the results released early this year, triggered the United States ban.

The Canadian attitude towards the tests is valid. There is little doubt that the research was a botch up. The behind the scenes story was reported in the February 6th issue of Science. In the words of one scientist who reviewed the data, "it was the lousiest experiment I've seen in my life."

Apparently, the technicians managed to mix up the rats and some were put in the wrong cages. Some of the rats that were not getting Red No. 2 diets ended up in the cages of those that were and vice versa. Some of the rats died during the experiment and were not immediately checked for cancer tumors.

In order to use what was left of test data, the F.D.A. scientists and their advisors quickly changed course. Instead of having four groups of rats on different levels of dye plus a control with no Red No. 2, they sorted the left-over rats into two groups — rats on high doses and rats on low doses.

The results were scrutinized in several ways. Even with the rat switch, they found that there was a significantly higher number of malignancies among the high dose rats than the low dose rats.

In Canada, the data mix up was given priority and the dye reprieved. In the United States, the data mix up was deferred by logic. Although some scientists advised Dr. Schmidt to have the data analyzed further or the experiment repeated, he claimed it would have taken too long. So, he acted. He did not claim that Red No. 2 would cause cancer. He simply had it removed from foods until someone could prove it didn't.

He reasoned that Red No. 2, along with many other colourings, have "provisional" approval. If future experiments demonstrate that the dye is safe, it will receive permanent approval. This puts the burden squarely in the laboratories of the manufacturers to prove that Red No. 2 is safe enough and useful enough to be included in foods.

The argument that a questionable food additive is guilty until proven innocent is a logical one. It's one that would comfort and convince Canadians that our health is protected by the Health Protection Branch.

RED STEWING DISHES: CHINESE WAY

tiny bennett

Visiting Toronto for the Canadian National Sportsmen's Show recently, I made a fast trip down into the Chinese section and stocked up with items from a wonderful grocery store.

Now I know that many of my readers live far away from such commercial sources of Chinese foods but I just want to say that if you get the chance, don't fail to stop off and stock up.

I bought imported Chinese soy sauces at 75 cents for a 22-ounce bottle; frozen wonton squares and egg roll pastry squares, all rolled and cut and ready for use, at 40 cents a pound; a beautiful Chinese kitchen knife-hatchet of razor-sharp steel, imported from China and costing $3.95; fresh ginger root 69 cents a pound, fresh bean sprouts 25 cents a pound, noodles, Chinese cabbage, fresh waterchestnuts and Patna rice 34 cents a pound.

So naturally when I arrived home it was Chinese food time.

However one of the best dishes that I did in a three-day orgy of Chinese cooking, was one that any homemaker, in any part of Canada can prepare, since the necessary ingredients are available in all types of grocery stores and supermarkets.

It is a dish that one seldom sees on the fairly standard Canton type menus in the average Chinese restaurant, even though it is in a style that is very popular in China. It is red stewing, and that's not a pun either.

This system of cooking uses a much greater quantity of soy sauce than any other style, and sugar is added, which again is a different step in the preparation of what are essentially meat dishes. In fact it is so distinctively Chinese it is not possible to relate it to occidental cuisine.

The process is a bit like braising but of course braising is also used in Chinese cooking, so we just have to go along and use the rather ugly translation of whatever the Chinese call it — Red Stewing. It is easy, inexpensive, time-saving and absolutely delicious.

There are many classical red stewing dishes that use whole boiling fowls, large pork pieces, beef, lamb, ducks and even oxtails, and I have discovered there are variations unlimited, as each area of China appears to have its own versions.

However by far the easiest and most suitable recipe for red stewing uses cut-up chicken. And this is what we have been recently enjoying at home, here's my fairly authentic recipe for:

TINY'S RED STEWED CHICKEN

Traditionally this dish is included as part of a large number of Chinese dishes to make a rounded meal. However for a low-cost dinner for the average family, one can fix this chicken dish, make some rice, and either stir fry a vegetable dish with bean sprouts, onion, celery, mushrooms and green peppers or have just chicken, rice and say a dish of poached spinach or cabbage cooked on the crispy side.

Take a good frying chicken and cut it up into even sized pieces about the size of a ping pong ball, discarding only the neck and wing tips.

This is an easy job with a Chinese hatchet but if it poses any problems get your butcher to do it, and make sure the legs and thighs are chopped in half, and the back and the breast are all chopped into even-sized pieces, bones and all.

Put all the chicken pieces into a heavy pot, add a scant two cups of hot water from the tap and place over medium heat, uncovered and bring to the simmering mark.

This only takes a couple of minutes but while it is heating mix in a bowl one-third cup light soy sauce; two tablespoons sherry and ¼ teaspoon salt. Add three small slices of fresh ginger root, or two pinches ground dried ginger and add the stirred mix to the simmering chicken and gently mix.

Turn the heat down low, cover and check it and adjust heat until the liquid just barely bubbles. After 30 minutes, turn over the chicken and cover, repeating this 30 minutes later when you should also add two tablespoons coarse brown sugar (any brown sugar will do (white if you don't have brown).

Test for tenderness but a fryer takes about 1½ hours.

For roughly the last half hour, remove the lid, turn up the heat just a notch and let it steam a little to reduce the sauce. Then serve with rice and choice of vegetables.

Meat cuts can be cooked in an identical fashion, using exactly the same ingredients, and extra time so that it reaches the tender stage. A cut of meat, is hauled out, sliced thin, chunked, or even diced if it is to be served with other Chinese dishes.

The liquid left in the pot should be carefully saved, as it makes what the Chinese call their "master sauce," and this sauce can be stored in the fridge and added to a later, suitable dish.

My family enjoyed this so much I had to cook it three days in a row, as one of my dishes in my orgy of Chinese cooking; the leftovers by the way jelly when chilled.

Don't Be Bashful About Using Soybeans

Soybeans and the products made from soybeans — soy flour, soy oil, soy grits, soy milk are a few — are no longer new to homemakers. Inevitably, a few have been reluctant to make use of this high protein food to fortify the protein in eggs, milk products, and in the smaller portions of fish and meat their dollars will buy today.

To reach those who still are not familiar with the cooking, combining and enjoyment of soys, two of the easiest forms will be talked about in this article — soy flour at 55 cents for a pound and soy grits at 75 cents. Both are higher in price than dry soy beans at 39 cents for a pound, but they are used in smaller quantities because both are ready to use in combination with other ingredients. Dry soy beans must first be cooked and for some purposes put through a grinder.

Once more I will give the easiest way to prepare the dry soys. For 2 or 3 servings (can be stored cooked, in refrigerator for 2 days), soak ¼ cup dry beans in 1 cup cold water.

Next day, drain well (keep the water), put the beans through a coarse grinder.

Simmer in the water in which they were soaked, for one hour, adding more boiling water as needed to prevent sticking. Cook gently until tender but still have texture something like broken nuts. The beans are now ready to mix with chopped or powdered herbs, other vegetables, and vegetable juices as needed and then further cooked just long enough to blend flavors while vegetables become tender.

Soy grits do away with overnight soaking and grinding. They are like a fairly coarse meal, handy to keep in stock for quick use. They are ready to cook for use with other ingredients in a much shorter time than whole dry soys.

Use ½ cup grits into 1 cup boiling lightly salted water. Cook at a gentle simmer until all moisture is gone, about 5 minutes, stirring occasionally to prevent sticking.

The cooked grits are then ready to use in loaves, patties, or casseroles, substituted for mashed, or ground soy beans in recipes you may already have, or to use in place of cooked rice, oats or other grains in similar dishes.

Or you make like to use the following recipes which include soy grits. Cooked, the cooled grits may be stored in a covered glass jar in refrigerator for 2 to 3 days.

Soy Grits Loaf

½ cup soy grits, cooked as above
½ cup mixed celery, carrot, onion, diced
¼ tsp. salt
boiling water to cover
½ cup crushed wholewheat toast
1 Tbsp. chopped parsley
¼ cup canned tomato juice

Barely cover vegetables with boiling water. Add salt, and simmer until tender and most of liquid absorbed, about 10 minutes. Add cooked soy grits, toast crumbs, parsley and tomato juice. Mix well and reheat. Serve with a spoonful steamed brown rice; or, before tomato juice is added, form into patties to serve on half a wholewheat bun, with heated tomato juice poured over top. Serves 2 for a good lunch.

When wanted for a complete main meal add 2 small eggs lightly beaten into the mixture with the toast crumbs and parsley. Reheat for 5 minutes but do not boil. Serve as suggested above.

Delicious and nutritious potato cakes make a quick meal when you have a few prepared soy grits in the refrigerator.

Soy-Potato Cakes

¼ cup prepared soy grits
1½ cup mashed potatoes
¼ tsp. salt
2 Tbsp. non-instant skim milk powder
1 Tbsp. wheat germ
2 Tbsp. oil, or soft margarine

Pat into about 4 cakes. Coat with the wheat germ and brown in a hot pan with the oil or margarine. Serves 2; when only 2 are wanted, keep the other 2, covered and refrigerated; for next day they will be fine in a brown bread sandwich with a green salad.

Soy flour is creamy white and of a similar texture to non instant skim milk powder — fluffy almost. It provides a way of introducing more of the essential proteins, vitamins and minerals of the soy bean to breads, cakes and cookies, and even to make pastry more worth eating.

One tablespoon of soy flour added to soups, either homemade or canned, upgrades the meal; in baking, two tablespoons of the flour in each cup of wheat flour makes a great difference not only in richness of flavor but in the product remaining fresh for a longer time than with all wheat flour. This indicates a little more moisture is needed in most recipes which state only conventional all-purpose, unbleached, and wholewheat flours in the list of ingredients.

Noise Destroys Hearing, Especially in Early Teens

Unless preventive steps are taken, noise is going to become an increasing health hazard, the B.C. health department director of speech and hearing said Tuesday.

Noise-related hearing loss increases with age, David Zink told B.C. Water and Waste Association delegates at The Empress, and the big jump in hearing loss comes in the junior high school year.

Boys demonstrate greater hearing damage than girls, he said, and 30 per cent of the hearing loss in school children is noise-related.

He observed that blaring rock music is not going to cause permanent hearing loss unless exposure is prolonged over many months and years.

"The musicians are at risk, but not always the listeners," he said.

"Permanent hearing damage is the result of sudden impact, impulse or continuous higher noise levels that strike the inner ear before the normal natural protecting mechanisms can be activated," he explained.

Continuous noise from snowmobiles, tractors and motorcycles can also damage the hearing of the operator.

He agreed that properly fitted hearing protection helps.

But apart from the effects of noise on hearing, Zink observed there is a relationship between noise and mental and physical well-being.

Studies have shown that a loud noise such as an ambulance siren has three physical effects: shrinking the blood vessels, increasing the cholesterol level and releasing adrenalin.

"The possible net result is that the heart is strained by attempting to pump thicker blood through smaller blood vessels," he said.

Hubby Tells Wife To 'Think Pink'

DEAR ABBY: I am expecting my fourth child in May. My husband and I already have three boys, and of course we'd like to have a little girl this time because four is my limit.

My husband constantly tells me and everyone else he sees that if I don't have a girl this time, he will "divorce" me. (He's only kidding of course, but it hurts me to hear it just the same.)

He has gone out and bought a lot of pink baby clothes, and he's even ordered baby furniture in pink! On Valentine's Day he sent me a card, saying, "THINK PINK."

What should I give this expert needler for Father's Day in case I have another boy?—P.G.

DEAR P.G.: A pink EYE!

DEAR ABBY: Since we have returned from our Christmas vacation, I have needed to get something off my chest.

Every year my husband insists that we take our children to visit his parents over the holidays because they are so eager to see the grandchildren and they'd be "hurt" if we didn't. This involves a four-day automobile trip, which we make only once a year.

During the eight days we were there this year, the grandparents left us and our children four times to babysit for their daughter while she and her husband attended some holiday parties!

I didn't expect my husband's parents to stay home all the time we were there, but I did resent them spending so much time with their daughter, who lives right in town and sees them the rest of the year.

Since I don't have the nerve to point this out to them, I hope you'll print this as a reminder to grandparents that when their children and grandchildren make such a special effort to visit them, they should limit their outside activities.

Thanks. It's very hard to discuss in-law problems with a husband. — FEELS BETTER

DEAR FEELS: Don't rely on the in-laws to see this and mend their ways. The solution to your problem can be found through some honest dialogue with your husband. You have a legitimate beef. Start talking.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think about a person who would accept a lovely, handcrocheted gift and then enter it in a handicraft show as her own creation? She even removed my "especially handmade" label from it. — HURT AND FURIOUS

DEAR HURT: She can't be playing with a full deck. Let her know that YOU know of her shenanigans.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are in the process of seeking an inexpensive way to get a divorce. We are already living apart and are in total agreement on everything, including the custody of our child and the visitation rights. All we have to do is get it all down in writing and make it legal.

We inquired at the Legal Aid Society but were told that we don't qualify for low-cost legal aid because we are both gainfully employed.

The other alternative is a "divorce kit," which is a kind of "do-it-yourself" divorce, costing $95 for papers plus a $3 fee for filing.

As we see it, the $3 fee is the only necessary action to be taken by us. Isn't it possible to write up our own legal papers and have them notarized?

Why do we have to go through with the expense of having a lawyer write up the papers when we are in complete agreement on all the terms? FRIENDLY PARTING

DEAR FRIENDLY: Regardless of how "friendly" and "in agreement" you two may be, I would still recommend legal counsel. Some of those "do-it-yourself" divorces are more expensive in the long run than the regular kind are.

INDOOR GARDENS

By LYNN AND JOEL KAPP

Dear Lynn and Joel:

When I was in Hawaii recently I purchased a funny-looking, completely bare log—no roots, no toots, no nothing. They told me it would be a plant someday. Can you tell me what to expect?—F.L.

Dear F.L.:

What you bought is a Ti Plant, a member of the Dracaena family. It grows abundantly in the wet forests of Hawaii and has recently been introduced as an indoor plant. Because it is so easily propogated, the canes are cut in sections, then imported and sold in most variety stores.

When the pieces are replanted in moistened planter mix, they form roots and a "Ti" (pronounced "tea") plant begins to emerge from the sides and top. The plant has two basic forms — Green Ti and the Red Ti (Lipton's hasn't come up with one yet) — and is grown primarily for its handsome foliage.

In its native habitat, the Ti Plant attains a height of up to 12 feet, but don't expect those proportions in your home unless you're prepared to cut a hole in your ceiling. This plant serves many useful purposes — in Hawaii the leaves are used as tablecloths and plates, and in the butcher shop fish and pork are wrapped in Ti leaves and steamed.

The plant needs bright, indirect light, prefers a warm temperature with the soil kept uniformly moist, and regular feeding helps retain the color. And if you're into such things, you might even try "reading" young Ti leaves.

A Different Scent

TORONTO (CP) — Estee Lauder of Estee Lauder Cosmetics Ltd., in surburban Agincourt says that when a man buys perfume for a woman who always wears one particular fragrance he should "give her something very different." Mrs. Lauder also recommends a collection of solid perfume gifts in compact form to be carried in handbags.

Sweet Smell Of Success

By PETER O'NEILL

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — The sweet smell of success is evading Indian perfumers anxious to break into Western markets.

They are concerned that Western women still appear to prefer alcohol-based European perfumes to Indian scents like Rat Rani (Queen of the Night), distilled in sandalwood oil.

In contrast of the fleeting fragrance of a European perfume, the tiniest drop of natural Indian perfume lingers for hours.

Although these heavily aromatic scents are popular in the Middle East, Indian perfumers are experimenting with alcohol bases to produce thinner and subtler aromas to attract Western women.

Most perfumes here are based on centuries-old family recipes derived from flowers, which have to go through a long process of distillation and mixing.

The Indian Perfumes and Flavors Association complains about government controls on alcohol that have made the move to alcohol-based perfumes more difficult.

Pure alcohol is difficult to obtain and the transfer of products from one factory to another for secondary processes often incurs interstate border taxes.

There are also bans and restrictions on essential imports like phenylethyl alcohol, orange oil and cedarwood oil.

D. D. Kelkar of the Indian Perfumes and Flavors Association estimates that 75 per cent of all Indian perfumes are bought by Indian men.

Village men often buy a small wad of scented cotton from a migrant perfume vendor, who moves from town to village selling from the traditional "Attar" (the oil-based natural perfume) box with its detailed carvings in ivory inlay.

Inside the box may be up to 30 fine glass bottles, containing perfumes adapted to the different climatic zones of the country. Indian perfumes can blend with the winter cold of the north, the torrid heat of the central plains or the steaming heat of the south.

But the perfume business involves more than just sweetening the body's odor. Last year some 2,100 metric tons of perfumes and flavors were produced here, both for the individual and for a whole range of products from sweets to toilet disinfectants.

More than 5,000 metric tons of joss sticks, the fragrance of the smoke of which has become known all over the world in recent times, are also produced in India every year.

Rhubarb—Harbinger of Spring

(Prepared by the Division of Community Nutrition of the B.C. Department of Health.)

Rhubarb is the first fresh fruit of the year and the harbinger of spring.

It's not difficult to distinguish field rhubarb from the hot-house variety which is available throughout the winter. Field rhubarb has a deeper red color than hot-house rhubarb and a more pronounced acid flavor. The rhubarb you'll soon be seeing in the stores is graded Canada No. 1 or Canada Domestic.

When buying, look for firm, crisp, straight stalks with pink to rosy-red color. Avoid choosing wilted, oversized or very thin stalks. For best flavor, use rhubarb as soon as possible after purchase.

To store in the refrigerator for a short time, rtmove the leaves and pack in plastic bags. If the leaves are left on, they tend to draw moisture from the stalks and cause them to wilt. Trimming prevents this and the plastic helps lock the moisture in.

To retain the rosy color of rhubarb, do not peel before cooking. Wash the stalks in cold water and chop. Since rhubarb is naturally very juicy, only a tiny amount of water is required for cooking. Sugar should be added to lessen the acid taste of the fruit.

For most people, the mention of "rhubarb" conjures up visions of delicious rhubarb pie. But there are lots of other serving ideas for rhubarb — as a sauce, in a compote, cooked in the oven and even as an accompaniment to buttered bread. Keep in mind that the flavor of rhubarb complements that of other fruits such as strawberries, blueberries and pineapple.

Food Advisory Services of Agriculture Canada has developed two rhubarb recipes, which are guaranteed to be winners. The "Rhubarb Bavarian Dessert" and "Rhubarb Upside Down Cake" will accent your menus with color and flavor.

RHUBARB BAVARIAN DESSERT

Base:

1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
½ cup margarine, softened

Combine dry ingredients. Cut in butter until mixture resembles coarse bread crumbs. Spread evenly in greased 9-inch square cake pan. Bake at 350 degrees F. until lightly browned (10 to 12 minutes). Cool.

Topping:

4 cups chopped rhubarb (about 1½ pounds)
¼ cup water
1¼ cups sugar
Dash salt
2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
1-3 cup cold water
Red food coloring (optional)
½ pint (1¼ cups) whipping cream, whipped

Combine rhubarb, ¼ cup water, sugar and salt. Simmer until rhubarb is tender, stirring occasionally. Soak gelatin in ⅓ cup cold water. Add to hot rhubarb and stir until dissolved. Add food coloring if desired. Chill until partially set. Fold in whipped cream. Turn onto base and chill until firm (about 3 hours). Nine servings.

RHUBARB UPSIDE DOWN CAKE

¼ cup butter
¾ cup brown sugar
1 tablespoon orange juice
1½ pounds rhubarb, cut in 2-inch pieces
2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons sugar
1 teaspoon finely grated orange rind
⅓ cup butter
1 beaten egg
¾ cup milk

Melt ¼ cup butter in 9-inch square cake pan. Stir in brown sugar and orange juice. Arrange rhubarb on top. Sift dry ingredients and add orange rind. Cut in ⅓ cup butter until mixture resembles coarse bread crumbs. Combine egg with milk. Add to flour mixture and stir until just combined. Spread batter over rhubarb. Bake at 350 degrees F. until cake springs back when pressed lightly (35 to 40 minutes). Cool five minutes, then turn out on serving dish. Serve warm. Six servings.

Armada of Sail Gathering

By JACK CAVANAUGH

NEW YORK (Reuter) — The most spectacular armada of sailing vessels since the days when clipper ships ruled the seas will sail up the Hudson River to New York on the Fourth of July in a maritime salute to the 200th birthday of the United States.

More than 600 ships of varying sizes and shapes from at least 25 countries will join in the procession. With ensigns flying and sails billowing in the wind, the square-riggers will sail 20 miles from New York's Upper Bay to Spuyten Duyvil Creek at the northern tip of Manhattan.

Like ghosts from the maritime past, barques, brigantines, schooners, sloops and other seagoing anachronisms will sail majestically past more than 5,000 spectator boats and between 50 and 60 naval vessels from a score of countries.

The non-profit organization arranging the sail-past expects more than five million people to see the show from the New York and New Jersey shorelines, rooftops, piers and Manhattan skyscrapers. President Ford is expected to watch from the aircraft carrier Forrestal, which will serve as the reviewing ship.

An estimated 25,000 sailors will man the vintage vessels, most of them naval cadets who use the sailing ships for training purposes. Nationality committees have been set up to seek accommodation for the visiting seamen in homes in the New York metropolitan area.

Nearly five years in the making, the Hudson River spectacular is expected to cost more than $70 million, most of which will be borne by foreign governments.

The stars of the show will be 14 "tall ships," a classic and rare, sailing vessel.

The largest tall ship expected is Spain's Juan Sebastian de Elcano, a four-masted, 370-foot topsail schooner. The oldest will be the Gazela Primeiro, a 170-foot barquentine built in 1883.

Before joining Operation Sail, about 100 of the ships will take part in one or more of three legs of a transatlantic race organized by the British Sail Training Association. The race will start in Plymouth, England, May 2 and end in Newport, R.I., June 29.

About 100 smaller vessels will be shipped across the Atlantic by freighter.

To clear the way for the armada, the Coast Guard will close the Port of New York to commercial traffic on the Fourth of July. At 10 a.m. the fleet will weigh anchor and, escorted by Coast Guard launches, begin its parade from the Verrazano Bridge at Staten Island up the Hudson, beneath the George Washington Bridge to Spuyten Duyvil. From there, the ships will move to berths throughout the port.

So far, the armada includes 80 ships from West Germany, 60 from Britain, 15 from Poland and 12 from France. Other countries sending vessels include Italy, Norway, Denmark, Chile, Colombia, Argentina, Romania, Japan and Portugal.

Frank Braynard, a maritime author and historian who has been the major driving force behind Operation Sail, says Japan is spending $3 million to refit the four-master steel barque Nippon Maru.

Braynard says the fleet will be the biggest of its kind since 1827.

That year, 26 British, French and Russian ships of the line defeated more than 80 Turkish and Egyptian vessels in the Eastern Mediterranean during the Greek war of independence.

Top Dollar To Skin Doctors

WINNIPEG (CP) — Dermatologists are the highest paid specialists receiving payment from the Manitoba Health Services Commission, the organization said Tuesday in its annual report.

The commission said payments made to the province's five dermatologists in 1975 averaged $94,130, compared with $82,450 the previous year.

Total expenses for medical and other health services in 1975 amounted to $67 million, an increase of $4.5 million over the previous year.

Average payments to other specialists listed included $57,610 for paediatrics, $43,050 for psychiatrists, $44,720 for general practioners in urban centres and $49,420 for general practioners in rural areas.

The report also said the cost of operating beds in public general hospitals increased in 1975 to $74 from $58 a day.

Higher salaries, more staff and the rising cost of drugs and medical supplies all contributed to the increase, the report said.

Big Hydro Hike Eyed In Man.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba Hydro may have to increase its rates by 31 to 45 per cent during the next four years to meet its financial obligations, the chairman of the crown corporation said Tuesday. Leonard Bateman told the legislature's public utilities committee the size of the estimated increases depends on the success of the federal government's anti-inflation program and on interest rates remaining stable.

Dental Plan Start

WINNIPEG (CP) — Despite a lack of support from dentists, the Manitoba government plans to begin a dental health care program in public schools. Health Minister Larry Desjardins told the legislature Tuesday the government has met on many occasions with the provincial dental association and failed to agree on the plan. He said the main issue is whether the government or the association should run the dental plan.

Justice Works

EDOMONTON (CP) — The slow process of justice worked to the advantage of two men who appeared in Alberta Supreme Court Tuesday for sentencing for their part in a 1974 bank robbery. Mr. Justice J. C. Cavanagh told Stanley George Roberts, 21, of Edmonton, and Garry Donald Borwick, 23, of Calgary, that becauseo f delays in getting their case to trial, they have had time to straighten out their lives and prove themselves. Court was told Roberts has behaved himself and worked steadily since the incident, avoiding trouble. Borwick had another conviction in 1975 but has behaved himself since. Mr. Justice Cavanagh placed Roberts on probation for one year and Borwick on probation for two years.

Escapers Sentenced

EDMONTON (CP) — Two men were each sentenced to three-year jail terms Tuesday on charges resulting from their escape from the Fort Saskatchewan jail last February. Renold Joseph Morrison, 22, and 33-year-old Ronald Glen Westad, who were recaptured in Calgary eight days after they escaped with two other men, pleaded guilty to the charges. Each received six month sentences for escaping.

TEEN-AGE DRINK CARD

WINNIPEG (CP) — Rene Toupin, minister responsible for the Manitoba Liquor Control Commission, said Tuesday the Manitoba Hotel Association is in the final stages of preparing the design of an identification card for teenagers who have difficulty proving their age.

Toupin said the cards will be available at cost and will include the name, age and photograph of the bearer.

The minister said the card will be required to meet government specifications.

The legal drinking age in Manitoba was reduced to 18 in 1970.

Mirage Mystery Cleared

NEW YORK — (NYT) — On his penultimate push toward the North Pole, in 1906, Robert E. Peary sighted a range of peaks rising above the icecap about 400 miles west of the northern tip of Greenland. He named the distant peaks Crocker Land, and so they appeared on at least one map.

Seven years later, another Arctic explorer, Donald B. MacMillan, trekked to within a day's march of Peary's Crocker Land.

"Great heavens, what a land!" MacMillan exclaimed. But as he drew closer, the peaks slowly disappeared, and by night he knew that there was nothing there but a flat plain of ice.

Crocker Land was a mirage, probably of the most spectacular type known as a fata morgana — which has played visual tricks on many a sailor or explorer down through the centuries.

Now a meteorologist at Pennsylvania State University has provided a new and more detailed scientific explanation of the atmosphereic causes of mirages, particularly the fata morgana.

In a paper presented in Boston at the annual meeting of the Optical Society of America, Dr. Alistair B. Fraser of Penn State, a specialist in the optical properties of the atmosphere, said that under certain temperature and wind conditions the atmosphere "behaves as a dime-store magnifying lens: It is astigmatic or unfocusing."

Meteorologists have long known that the fata morgana is a mirage caused by the atmosphere acting as a lens, but the precise optical mechanisms have not been well understood. Fraser, with a graduate assistant, William H. Mach, analyzed the phenomenon in such detail that he said he was able to predict fairly successfully when and where he could see a fata morgana.

Fraser said in a telephone interview that fata morgana mirages were most commonly seen on enclosed bodies of evenly illuminated water or ice, such as lakes, straits or sounds, in the afternoon when slightly warmer air blowing out from land moves over the cooler surface.

In polar regions, however, the necessary conditions are produced by the so-called Arctic inversion, in which temperatures are lowest at the surface and increase with altitude because more heat is being radiated from the surface than is being received.

Under either of these conditions, Fraser said, the atmosphere tends to magnify distant objects vertically, causing a small boat to loom, as a towering lighthouse.

The atmosphere can also blur the surface so thoroughly that its true character is no longer recognizable — much like the grey smear of chalk dust left after a blackboard has been erased. The blur can resemble an uninterrupted bank of fog or a solid wall, which in reality is a magnified upward projection of the surface.

Conversely, the more familiar mirages, those pools of non-existent water on the desert or the highway, are the refracted and shimmering images of the clear sky above. They occur when in the lowest few feet of the atmosphere the air is warmer and substantially less dense than the air above it.

To produce the more spectacular fata morgana mirages requires just the right profile of air temperatures — layers of slightly warmer air on top of cooler air — as well as subtle oscillations in the atmosphere, Fraser said. Then out of the blur certain shapes may appear to emerge — battlements, turreted castles, a city, an aqeduct, or mountains such as those of Crocker Land.

Many of Fraseer's observations were made at Lake Ontario and Puget Sound.

The broader purpose of the research, which is funded by the National Science Foundation is to investigate the use of optics in determining subtle changes in atmospheric temperatures at various altitudes. This could be applied in studying atmospheres of other planets or as a substitute for balloon flights in observing temperature profiles of the earth's atmosphere.

Ganges Dam Sparks Dispute

By LEWIS M. SIMONS
Washington Post

DACCA — The political acrimony between Bangladesh and neighboring India that developed after the coup here seven months ago has become more bitter with a major dispute over sharing of the Ganges River waters.

At the core of the dispute is the Faramma Barrage, claimed to be the largest river dam in the world, which India built across the Ganges near where the river enters Bangladesh. The dam, which cost $177 million, was put into operation last April.

Now, in conjunction with reports of Indian-supported guerrilla attacks on Bangladesh border outposts, rising pro-Islamic and anti-Indian sentiment among Bangalis and a basic animosity between the two governments, the dam issue threatens to erupt into outright hostility.

A recent announcement that India has decided unilaterally to reduce the amount of water it is diverting away from Bangladesh may serve to defuse the issue, but it is still too early to know.

Bangladesh claims that the dam is withholding vital water and doing irreparable damage to agriculture, industry, fishing and forestry. The already meagre livelihoods of 12 million people who live in the river basin are said to be threatened. Government officials also charge that India has breached an agreement — reached just before the commissioning of the project that the dam would be utilized only after testing and consultations with this country.

India counters that the dam is vital for flushing out rising silt in the port of Calcutta, the vast nation's leading trade centre, and that some 215 million people — nearly three times the population of Bangladesh — rely upon the Ganges for water.

Observers in Dacca believe that there is some justification for both sides' arguments.

This forces the conclusion that the issue is essentially political: Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government is using the dam to put pressure on the new Bangladesh military regime, which is openly anti-Indian; Bangladesh is capitalizing on the fact that the river's water level has dropped markedly since April, to build popular support for the still-shaky regime.

A senior Bangladesh government official conceded this recently. "When the monsoon comes in June," he said during an interview in which he insisted that he not be identified, "the salinity being deposited on farmland will wash away and our people will forget the problem. But for now, it's very much in the interests of our government to make hay while the sun shines."

The political basis of the issue raises the question of how effective India's decision to reduce offtake will be in cooling tempers in Dacca.

Until the Indian announcement was made, the effect of the reduction in water in Bangladesh was to heighten tension among Bangalis. "If we can't get water, we're going to die," Ali Aftar, a farmer, said at his tiny farm near Parksey, on the eastern bank of the Ganges. "If we're going to die, we might as well join the army ant fight India for our water."

"India's action with Faramma has convinced the middle class that Mrs. Gandhi wishes us ill. My only fear is that the Indians will feel justified in substituting military action for political action."

Bangladesh argues that under the April accord, India was to divert a limited amount of water, to consult with Bengali technicians to determine what the effects were and to set levels for taking off water during the rest of the year.

Instead, according to B. M. Abbas, the leading Bangladesh expert on water and flood control, India never consulted his government while taking more water than allowed.

Abbas displayed an electronic monitoring graph of the level of the Ganges at Hardingh Bridge, near the farm of Ali Aftar. The graph indicated that the water level was five-to-six feet below its previous all-time low.

India is willing to discuss only the limits on water diversion for the period from mid-March until mid-May, traditionally the height of the dry season. Bangladesh insists that by operating the Faramma dam, India has extended the length of the dry season by several months. "We must discuss the entire year," Abbas said.

Clubs Mark Special Week

Special events are being held at the Victoria Boys and Girls' Club headquarters, 1240 Yates, to mark National Boys' and Girls' Clubs Week.

The club was open to the public from 3 to 5 p.m. and 6:30 to 9 p.m. today and will be open from 3 to 5 p.m. Thursday.

Thursday evening the club will honor about 120 volunteer workers at a banquet in the Juan de Fuca Recreation Centre.

A free disco dance will be held at the club on Friday while the public will also be able to view the club's activities from 3 to 5 p.m. and 6:30 to 9 p.m.

Special displays have been arranged at the Mayfair Shopping Centre and the Hillside Mall for Friday and Saturday.

The Mayfair display will show the programs enjoyed by the clubs while the Hillside Mall will feature members working at various crafts, which the public will be able to try for themselves.

The week's events will end with a Saturday evening banquet for the Boys' Club Soccer Association at the club.

There are close to 100,000 members in Boys' and Girls' Clubs across Canada.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

One day after about $3,800 worth of stereo equipment was stolen in Victoria, a 21-year-old Ontario man who came to B.C. about two months ago pleaded guilty to a theft charge Monday in Victoria provincial court.

Michael Marion, 230 Gorge East, also admitted possession of a known stolen $450 citizen's-band radio at the time of his arrest for the theft — and conceded he had a record of four jail terms in the last four years in Ontario for a total of 13 crimes.

Prosecutor Nicholas Lang said 10 stereo items and a camera were stolen about noon Monday from a truck parked behind a motel at 136 Gorge East. He said Marion took them to a motel at 741 Admirals in Esquimalt, where police recovered them later Monday.

The citizen's-band radio was stolen March 28 from a car parked on Dowler and Marion told police he bought it in a beer parlor for $40. Marion was remanded in custody by Judge Blake Allan to April 28 for a pre-sentence report and sentence.

Allan set surety bail of $5,000 for Robert George Walton, 29, of 3975 Cedar Hill Cross Road, one of three persons facing a joint Saanich charge of armed robbery in a $160 holdup March 24 at Mac's Convenience Store, 3624 Shelbourne.

Publication or broadcast of bail-hearing details was prohibited by the judge at the request of defence lawyer Douglas Christie. The three have chosen higher-court trial and a date for a preliminary hearing of the charge probably will be set next week.

Anthony Garfield Brown, 35, whose criminal record went back to 1958, pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of 19 capsules of heroin Feb. 9 in the Vancouver airport terminal in Richmond where he was about to board an airliner to Toronto.

Allan sentenced Brown to nine months in jail and ruled the time must be added to a 22-month sentence which Brown received from another Victoria judge March 4 after admitting one count of fraud and four of uttering.

Brown lost out in a request for a concurrent sentence. He said he was "working toward going on work release" so he could repay the $1,276 involved in the fraud and uttering case.

A total jail term of 40 days followed by a six-month term of probation was set by Allan for Duncan area resident Jacob Joseph Knelson, 45, who pleaded guilty to three Victoria charges.

One was for obtaining $79.55 in lodgings by fraud at the Empress Hotel Aug. 4, 1975. A second was for failure to appear in court Oct. 1, 1975, on the lodgings case. The third was for failure to report to a probation officer in September, 1975, on another matter.

Defence lawyer Michael Hutchison said alcoholism was to blame for much of Knelsen's record, which dated back to 1954, but his client hoped to break the habit this time. Allan tried to help by ruling Knelson cannot possess or consume alcohol during the probation.

★ ★ ★

Arthur Sheffield Drinkwater, 54, of 6660 Tamany, pleaded guilty to a Saanich charge of impaired driving Dec. 13, 1975. He was fined $350 by Judge William Ostler and a partial four-month driving ban was ordered.

City Budget Takes a Bath in Crystal

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

After nearly four hours of budget discussion Tuesday, Victoria city council succeeded in lopping $338,000 from the city's 1976 recreation budget totalling $1.4 million.

In doing so it agonized over constantly-rising operating costs of the city's four major sports or recreation facilities; rejected at least one drastic economy measure (closing the Crystal Pool one day a week); but agreed to reassess its whole philosophy with regard to subsidizing recreation in the community.

Taking into account capital expenditures, this year's projected operating loss on the Crystal Pool, the Memorial Arena, Royal Athletic Park and McPherson Playhouse will exceed $200 000.

Even the once-profitable Arena, as Ald. Bob Wright wryly noted, is "going west" with a budgeted deficit of more than $7,000.

Mayor Mike Young told council he doesn't regard the operating loss — or "subsidy," as Ald. Bill Tindall preferred to call it — particularly shocking in itself.

But he added: "I think the point we should be looking at is whether we are subsidizing in the right places. This will mean a rather painstaking analysis of who is getting the benefits," either directly or indirectly.

In particular, the mayor suggested, such a study should relate the cash grants which the city gives to various sporting and cultural groups to the assistance they receive in subsidized use of facilities.

"We must make sure we are not unduly favoring particular segments of the community and ignoring others," he added.

Much of the discussion centred on the $1.9 million Crystal Pool which accounts for the major portion of operating losses with a budgeted deficit for 1976 of $104,662.

Recreation committee chairman Ald. Ron McKenzie, who noted the pool is already closed on Saturday and Sundays evenings because scant use didn't justify its remaining open, recommended the closure policy also be extended to all day Monday.

He estimated this would save an additional $25,000 to $30,000 a year on staff and other operating costs, although recreation manager Jack Morgan seemed to regard that as an unduly optimistic estimate.

A better approach, Morgan suggested, would be to revise the present schedule of weekly activities in the Crystal, "to try to find out how economically we can operate."

(The pool's usage this year is projected for a total of 4,185 hours at a calculated hourly cost of $72.55).

The manager told council that three other major pools in the province of around the same size as the city's all run at similar deficits.

But Wright said citing comparisons is no rationale for operating at such a significant loss, otherwise he as a businessman might as well shrug and content himself with an unprofitable business because others in the province were similarly placed.

"I like to think we are ahead of the game," he snapped. "That kind of attitude just seems to justify big expenditures. Frankly, I'm sick of it."

Wright and other council members appeared shocked when they were informed that a pool lifeguard now earns $4.90 an hour, while a head lifeguard earns $6.41 and his relief $5.35. Lifeguard's wages this year at $50,000 are almost double the figure for 1975, when the pool was open for only seven months.

"The wage schedule has really put the screws on us in the last four or five years," said McKenzie, who also pointed out that one of the most heavily subsidized user groups is the Victoria Amateur Swimming Club with a total annual subsidy of more than $53,000.

He said the point may be reached where, in the interests of curbing runaway costs, municipalities have to consider rotating their pool opening days: Victoria's open one day, Oak Bay's another and so on.

One revenue-boosting measure approved for the Crystal Pool was an increase in the locker rental charge, from the present 10 cents to 25 cents.

Council also agreed that sports organizations using Royal Athletic Park should pay for the use of stadium lights at an estimated $30 per hour. Morgan said until a recent check his staff had accepted a B.C. Hydro estimate that the lights were actually costing about $5 an hour.

The city has $15,000 in its reserve account toward the purchase of a $22,500 Zamboni ice scraper for th Memorial Arena, but council was told by McKenzie the present 18-year-old equipment has another "five to 10 years of life" left in it.

Morgan said he would like to see a substantial allocation set aside this year toward this "very important piece of equipment," but McKenzie said another $7,000 might be provided in 1977.

Even when the new equipment finally arrives that won't be the end of the costs. McKenzie said another $3,500 will have to be spent on enlarging the opening for it to enter the arena, because the new model is three inches taller.

With preliminary scrutiny of all departmental budgets now completed, council has manged to cut about $1,950,000 from the original total expenditures of about $25 million.

But no guesswork on the eventual mill rate is possible because a number of substantial revisions still have to be made, and council will have its last assault on the budget at an all-day meeting April 27.

'Rock Pile' Garden Show Friday

On Friday and Saturday this week owners or tenants of "rock piles" will have the chance of admiring hundreds of exciting plants grown by devoted gardeners under somewhat similar conditions.

There will be differences to be sure. Some gardeners will have brought rocks to their property and arrange them to simulate as nearly as possible the very conditions that worry other owners.

The Vancouver Island Rock and Alpine Garden Society with its annual spring show is likely to be a great help to people who discover their property has underlying rock and very little soil.

The show will open at 2 p.m. on Friday of this week, and remain open until 10 p.m.; reopening on Saturday morning at 10 a.m., to close at 9 p.m. The location this year is in St. Mary's Church Hall, 1701 Elgin Street. Admission is 50 cents.

Balcony and patio gardeners too will find that even the one genus Saxifraga contains several dozens of flowering plants for open rock sites, differing in habit and appearance. The genus Sempervivum offers dozens more.

The Saaxifrages are so dicerse in habit and in their often spectacular flowers that one could have a rock garden with no other kinds of plants and yet not be in the least inhibited by monotony. Sempervivums have long been known at the cottage garden level by the Houseleek which establishes itself in cracks and crevices of masonry. Other varieties are far more interesting.

Tubs filled with suitably gritty soil mixtures will grow many of these fascinating plants successfully on sunny balconies and patios. They will be long lasting and of interest the whole year round. On frosty mornings Saxifrages have a beauty difficult to describe. The plant outlines are rimmed with white frost, a piece of perfection irresistible to camera artists.

Other aspects of specialist plant growing will be found at the show this week. The wild garden, becoming more important each year as wild land retreats further from the city, need be only a city lot in size yet filled with native flowering plants and ferns.

If not staying rigidly to only the native plants, primulas of all kinds will find a home in such spots, and these will be a feature of the show. In a garden having a native tree or two, an Arbutus or Oak, Fir or Pine, you have the beginning of a wild garden with a suitable environment for some of the choicest wild plants likely to be shown this week.

In shaded places too, often in conjunction with rock, ferns of many kinds can be established, some so intricately lovely as to be scarcely believable. And spring flowers that you never suspected existed in British Columbia — all these will be seen at this week's show.

Many of these native plants have been painstakingly collected by specialists, with collecting permits, in remote areas of the province, and brought to nursery or alpine garden for propagation and sale so that the wild supply is not depleted by casual and amateur gathering. How else shall we be able to have these treasures assured for future wild plant enthusiasts?

Home Nursing to Expand

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Home nursing care, available only in the core municipalities in recent years, will be expanded to Colwood, Langford, the Saanich Peninsula and Salt Spring Island this summer.

Dr. Allan Arneil, regional health officer, said Tuesday about 17 additional staff, including 10 registered nurses, will be hired to extend the home care program throughout most of the Capital district by the end of August.

The free home care comes in two programs, one to enable hospital patients to be discharged earlier than they otherwise would, the other to give nursing help in the home where needed, for example a regular injection required by an elderly person.

Home care is regarded as so important by regional directors, it was the only budget item this year where expansion funds were not trimmed.

The extension of the program will mean only the Sooke area and outer Gulf Islands are without it.

Speaking of the hospital replacement part of the program, Arneil said the choice in expanding was to increase benefits within the core area already served or extend the program to more of the region.

The decision was to extend the program geographically because the region wants as much as possible to offer equal services throughout the district, he said.

There are both social and financial benefits from the hospital replacement program and he ranks the social benefits first.

If the patient is a mother worrying about her children at home, she benefits if she can be moved home earlier with nursing and home-maker help.

The family benefits financially because the program pays for these services for the days saved in hospital. It also saves the $4 a day co-insurance charge.

Finally the tax-paying community benefits because hospital care in the latter stages probably runs $75 to $80 a day while home care can be provided for about $20 a day.

Arneil said the hospital replacement program isn't simply an economy move.

But taking certain patients out of hospital earlier than usual can only be done if there is an acute care hospital reasonably handy, in case there are complications and they have to be re-admitted in a hurry. That's why the program isn't feasible in the Sooke area or on the outer Gulf Islands, he said.

The hospital replacement program, by trimming patient stays, has provided the equivalent of 22 more hospital beds.

Meanwhile, the other part of the home care effort, the visiting nurse service, is keeping many patients from being admitted to hospital.

It's made available where a doctor submits the patient needs it and nurses make calls from 8 a.m. to 11 p.m., said Arneil.

Esquimalt Police Additions in May

Three new Esquimalt police positions approved at this week's council meeting won't likely be filled until sometime in May, according to Mayor Art Young.

The reason for the delay, Young said Tuesday, was that the positions had to be first approved by the police board which doesn't meet until April 22. The three positions, expected to cost Esquimalt taxpayers about $37,000 for the rest of the year, must be included in the budget which is not expected to pass until sometime in May.

In a report to the fire committee last month, chief Eric Burton said three additional men were necessary to maintain the current level of police and fire service because of overtime costs and time lost to court appearances.

Vorster-Angola Patch-Up Seen

Times News Services

CAPE TOWN — South Africa has made its first direct "peace-time" contacts with officials of the Cuban and Soviet-backed Angolan government and work has resumed on its big hydroelectric power project in southern Angola, South Africa officials disclosed Tuesday.

Observers here said the contacts could open the way for discussions on other outstanding issues between the two governments, deadly enemies during the recent Angolan civil war, and perhaps lead to the kind of accommodation that South Africa has worked out with its Marxist neighbor to the east, Mozambique.

The immediate reason for the contacts was to spell out details of an earlier reported agreement to allow construction to continue on the $270 million Calueque-Ruacana water power and irrigation project. The power complex straddles the Cunene River border between Angola and Namibia, which South Africa adminsters as Southwest Africa.

Work stopped on the Angolan side of the site March 27 when South Africa withdrew its last remaining troops from Southern Angola. African and Portuguese workers, fearing for their safety, also left.

METRIC HELP ON THE WAY IN SAANICH

Saanich is starting a program designed to ease the conversion to the metric system for taxpayers.

Council's finance, legislation and health committee agreed to municipal administrator Bill Tremayne's suggestion Tuesday that the municipal yard make an information kiosk, costing $450.

The kiosk will be mounted in the main lobby of the municipal hall and be fitted out with a variety of pamphlets explaining the conversion.

Tremayne said Saanich will be the first municipality to start such a program.

"We are attempting to get some uniformity in the change-over among the municipalities," he added.

Tremayne explained the kiosk will be portable and could easily be put on display at various shopping centres, using a trailer given the Saanich police department by the B.C. Police Commission.

Four Die in Ulster Countryside Violence

BELFAST (Reuter) — Four persons were killed in Northern Ireland Tuesday night and today as guerrillas appeared to switch their violent campaign against British rule to the countryside from the capital.

Police said a husband and wife and their daughter died when an incendiary device was planted in their home at Dromore, County Down, 20 miles south west of here.

Neighbors saw the blaze which destroyed the house, but were unable to help.

The motive for the attack was not clear, but police were working on the theory that it was a sectarian killing.

In another incident, a woman member of the Ulster Defence Regiment was shot and killed early today when a mobile patrol was ambushed by gunmen believed to be members of the Irish Republican Army (IRA).

The attack took place on a road near Middleton, County Armagh, an army spokesman said. The guerrillas fired several shots from automatic weapons, killing the woman and wounding a British soldier.

The woman was the seventh member of the defence regiment, a body of part-time soldiers attached to the British Army, to be killed this year.

The IRA stepped up its bombing campaign in Belfast two days ago, but 33 suspected guerrillas have been arrested and large quantities of explosives and arms, including rockets and mortars, have been found during the last 48 hours.

Meanwhile, across the border in the Irish republic, police cordoned off a mountain area in County Kerry on the Atlantic coast, where four armed men were believed to be hiding.

The gunmen were spotted by a police helicopter after $20,000 was robbed from a post office in a village nearby. Police were waiting for daylight to close in on the suspected hideout.

Police sources said the four gunmen might be members of the IRA, which is held responsible for a number of recent raids on banks, post offices and a mail train. The guerrillas are believed to have netted about $1 million in these raids.

Inspection Cost Up for Burners

Saanich residents will have to pay more to have oil or gas burners inspected and installed.

Council's fire and emergency program committee Tuesday agreed to new price structures, recommended by fire chief Harold Gains.

There will be an inspection fee of $7.50 for tanks up to 300 gallons and a permit will cost the same, $7.50. A permit now costs $3.75.

Inspections of tanks holding more than 300 gallons will cost 1½ cents for each gallon of the tank's capacity.

Installation of domestic oil or compressed gas burners will also cost $7.50 for the permit and another $7.50 for the inspection. The same fees will apply for the installation of range oil burners.

In other business, emergency program co-ordinator Jack Bush reported that Jaws (a piece of equipment used to rescue victims from badly damaged cars) will be delivered in about one week.

Police Flush Out Escapers

MADRID (UPI) — Dodging gunfire from across the French border, heavily armed police Tuesday recaptured most of the political prisoners who escaped through a prison toilet in Spain's biggest jailbreak since the civil war.

Aided by dogs and helicopters, police hunted down the 29 escaped convicts in the Pyrenees Mountains and nabbed 24 by late afternoon, the national news agency CIFRA said.

One fugitive was killed and another wounded in shootouts that also slightly injured a member of the para-military civil guard.

Shots fired at police from French territory indicated a few fugitives had slipped across the border, Cifra said.

The prisoners — most Basque separatists serving terms of up to 30 years for terrorism — escaped Monday from the maximum security Segovia Prison, 60 miles north of Madrid, in the biggest jailbreak since the 1936-39 civil war.

The prisoners escaped through a second-floor toilet into the penitentiary's sewer system that connects with Segovia's medieval drainage canals, Spanich press reports said.

In an apparently well-planned operation, a trailer-truck with double floors took the escapees to the Basque region where they tried to cross into France along a centuries-old smugglers' route from the Pyrenees town of Roncesvalles.

Police intercepted the truck at the border about 2 a.m. and arrested the young woman driver after a six-hour gun battle with the escapees.

Heavy Drinking Preceded Plunge

Evidence of two days' drinking was given Tuesday at an inquest into the death of a Victoria woman killed in a head-first plunge from a downtown hotel window last week.

Det. Sgt. Edward Hardy, of Victoria police, told coroner Edmond de St. Jorre and jurymen that Susan Aileen Morrison, 33, known also as Arlene Joyce van Slack, and William Dalton Davis had been drinking together the day of March 31 when they met at the King's Hotel.

Before the plunge, Davis said he went down the hall to a bathroom and when he got back to his room Morrison was hanging from the window. He yelled and grabbed the woman's ankles, telling her several times, "give me your hands," but got no response, he said in a statement.

Constable Ronald Stewart told the inquest he saw the woman dangling by her ankles and ran up three flights in an effort to help, but was met at Davis' room by the occupant, who said, "It's too late . . . I couldn't hang on."

The woman, whose home address was given as 2955 Albina, died of a skull fracture and brain damage, pathologist Dr. William Hay said.

More evidence will be given when the inquest resumes Monday at the Law Courts, when Davis will be heard.

DRUGS CAUSED DEATH

PORT ALBERNI — Jurors Tuesday attached no blame in the death of a 21-year-old Campbell River man. They found the death was due to accumulated effect of drugs before and after his arrest Jan. 29.

The inquest decided James Edward Bell died from respiratory failure caused by drugs he had consumed, including morphine or heroin, barbiturates and methadone, "and we feel no blame attached to anyone."

The jury made a strong recommendation that in future any prisoner requiring medical attention due to drug addiction be kept in hospital rather than in jail cells.

RCMP said they agreed with the recommendation, that they would prefer such individuals to be under medical supervision.

Bell was arrested for breaking into a medical building and was then a fugitive from Jordan River correctional camp. He told police he had been on a methadone program at Nanaimo and he was taken to West Coast General Hospital where a physician gave him a small dose of methadone before being returned to cells.

He was found dead in his cell the following morning.

An autopsy showed traces of three drugs in his system.

LAKES LIMITED FOR POLLUTION

A belief that B.C. is blessed with a large amount of standing water — lakes and ponds — was dispelled Tuesday by Ron Thomas, a B.C. fish and wildlife biologist, at the annual conference here of the B.C. Water and Waste Association.

He told the delegates that even the so-called dry province of Saskatchewan has four times more standing water than B.C.

"And B.C.'s 22,000 lakes pale into insignificance compared to the 250,000 in Ontario," he said.

"In fact B.C.'s 7,000 square miles of standing water ranks fifth in Canada behind Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba and Saskatchewan, and barely ahead of Alberta and Newfoundland."

Thomas was illustrating the importance of keeping B.C. pollution free.

He said such substances as heavy metals, toxic elements, petroleum wastes and chemical pesticides, which are toxic to most forms of life, should not be discharged in lakes.

He said freshwater fishing accounts for more than four million days of recreation annually in B.C.

"Resident anglers spend $50 million per year on the sport and obviously have a real vested interest in the fishery resource and the water resource on which it is dependent," he added.

"It is little wonder that the public is so concerned about waste disposal and its associated problems."

Natural Gas Users Face Stiff Prices

Politicians are looking at a possible price increase of 19 per cent July 1 for natural gas prices that rose 25 per cent Nov. 1 under an agreement between Ottawa and Alberta.

Although oil prices get most attention in the talks, federal officials say the price of natural gas will be going up as well.

"It's all part of the same package," says Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie. "The gas prices will be increasing at the same time."

The increase could be as much as 41 cents a thousand cubic feet, adding $61.50 to the annual bill of an average homeowners using natural gas for space heating.

It would bring the average bill to $390 a year from the current $328.50, based on Canadian Gas Association estimates of 150 thousand cubic feet for average annual residential consumption. Before last fall's increase the average was about $265.

The current federal-Alberta agreement, which expires June 30, boosted prices last fall by 43 cents a thousand cubic feet, or an average $64.50 yearly for a homeowner.

That increase brought the Toronto wholesale price—the benchmark used in the agreement—to $1.25 a thousand cubic feet. But the gas costs almost $1 more by the time it reaches consumers through distributing companies.

Federal officials say that for every $1 increase in the price of a barrel of oil, natural gas probably will rise 17 cents a thousand cubic feet.

The $1-a-barrel price increase for oil sought by western producers would thus add 34 cents to the price of a thousand cubic feet of gas. But that still would leave gas at only 85 per cent of the price of oil on the basis of an equivalent amount of heating value.

The federal government is committed to gradually bringing gas prices up to full commodity value with oil over a period of two or three years.

Alberta, the main producing province, suggests prices should go to 90 per cent this year, adding about seven cents more to the price of a thousand cubic feet of gas.

Formal negotiations on both oil and natural gas prices resume May 5 or May 6 when Prime Minister Trudeau meets provincial premiers privately at his home here.

Pilot's Fatigue Blamed in Crash

EDMONTON (CP) — A Winnipeg psychiatrist was closely questioned Tuesday about his conclusion that the pilot of an aircraft which crashed in the high Arctic killing 32 men was suffering from fatigue and frustration.

Dr. William L. Lamberd, a professor at the University of Manitoba, was cross-examined by Eric Lane, a Toronto lawyer, at a judicial inquiry into the crash under Judge William Stevenson of the District Court of Alberta.

The crash, the worst aviation disaster in Canadian Arctic history, occurred Oct. 30, 1974. The plane, a Panarctic Oils Ltd.-owned Lockheed Electra, smashed into sea ice off Melville Island, 2½ miles short of a landing strip at Rea Point, 1,400 miles north of Edmonton.

The Ministry of Transport (MOT) report of the crash said the plane's pilot, Brian Thomson, 30, of Leduc, Alta., had been increasingly dissatisfied and frustrated during the year before the accident and he wanted to either change jobs or leave flying completely.

"There is evidence of chronic fatigue in the few months prior to the accident which may have been partially caused by his liver condition and amplified by the frustration and anxiety which was developing," the report said.

Lane, representing Panarctic employees and insurers, asked Dr. Lamberd how he could justify the reference to fatigue when the pilot's widow testified Monday that the summer was a light period for Arctic flying and Thomson wasn't tired.

Dr. Lamberd said chronic frustration often brings on fatigue and that Mrs. Thomson had indicated to him in an interview after the crash that he was both frustrated and fatigued.

Caracas Takeover A $25M Reprisal

CARACAS (UPI) — The government has taken over the $25 million Venezuelan holdings of Owens Illinois, saying the U.S. glass company offended the dignity of Venezuela by bowing to the demands of left-wing guerrillas holding a company executive.

The guerrillas had threatened to kill William Niehous, 45, unless Owens Illinois printed charges the glass company had engaged in "political and economic espionage" and bribery of Venezuelan government officials and congressmen.

The government took the unprecedented action Tuesday after the charges were published in New York and London newspapers.

Interior Minister Octavio Lepage said in a communique the publication of the charges "offends the dignity of the country, propitiates the subversion of constitutional order and ignores the legitimacy of national institution."

Smoke Break Extended To Freedom

A free ticket to a jazz ballet concert Monday night in Victoria also proved to be a ticket to freedom for a Victoria area man who has failed to complete all five of the major prison sentences he has received since 1963.

Colwood RCMP and William Head officials said Richard Rodriguez, who will be 40 Sunday, is the subject of a warrant charging him with being unlawfully at large after he went to the Royal Theatre lobby for a smoke and kept on going.

Rodriguez was one of three inmates escorted to the Royal by a single corrections officer for the concert. At intermission, the other inmates stayed in their seats as the escort officer went to the washroom and Rodriguez then said he was "going for a smoke."

The officer returned to be informed Rodriguez was in the lobby. He searched for 15 minutes, then phoned William Head to report the disappearance. The other two inmates saw the rest of the concert.

Penitentiary Service spokesman Jack Stewart said the three prisoners, out on a temporary absence, had paid for their own tickets and that of their escort.

Officials said the record for Rodriguez goes back to 1956 with a fine for assault causing bodily harm at Campbell River. Then came six-month jail terms, which Rodriguez completed, for theft in Port Alberni in 1956, break-in at Vernon in 1961 and break-in at Kamloops in 1962.

In July and November of 1963, Rodriguez was sentenced at Campbell River to a total of two years less a day for three break-ins. He didn't finish the time and escaped in February, 1964.

In April and June of 1964, he was sentenced at Calgary and Prince Albert, Sask., to six years for the escape and 15 new break-ins. Added to the six years was 517 days from the 1963 terms.

He was paroled, and in September, 1967, was sentenced in Regina to three more years for two break-ins. By now, his unexpired time was 1,456 days.

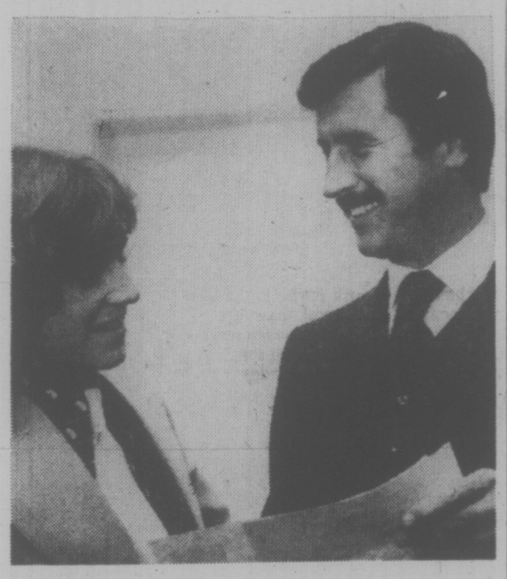
He was paroled again in 1969 and had two minor convictions in the Victoria area over the next 15 months before his parole was cancelled in March, 1971.

Paroled again, he was sentenced in April, 1972, in Victoria to 3½ more years for a break-in. This time, his unexpired total was up to 1,718 days.

He escaped again, and in June, 1974, was sentenced in Duncan, Nanaimo and Victoria to a total of eight months for possession of known stolen property and being unlawfully at large.

The unexpired time had grown so large that the eight months made Rodriguez' total time seven years, three months and 13 days. That term did not begin until June 16, 1975, and Rodriguez was transferred to William Head July 25, 1975.

He was allowed what an official called "passes of a social development nature" starting in September and was on his seventh Monday night.



GRAND PRIZE OF $1,000 and certificate from Canada Permanent Trust Co. were presented Tuesday at Government House to Nanaimo District Secondary School student Kevin Davies, 17, by the company's Pacific region vice-president Sydney Mentiphy, right. Resident writer John Metcalfe, of Concordia University, Montreal, judged Kevin's short story best of more than 2,000 entries in the firm's 1975 student writing contest, making him the first islander and the first male to win the prize in its nine-year history. Salt Spring Vote On Leisure Site

Ratepayers on Salt Spring Island vote Saturday on whether they favor buying and developing a 10-acre recreation property through a one-time levy of not more than 2½ mills.

The land belongs to the Salt Spring Island Lions Club and now has two tennis courts, a quarter-mile track and a football field on it. The Lions have invested about $100,000 in recent years on its purchase and development.

"But they don't want to get their money back out of it," said George Heinekey, Salt Spring director on the Capital Regional Board.

"They have initiated the development of this property for the community and they'll be happy if we continue along that course."

If the 2½-mill levy is approved it would raise between $60,000 and $65,000 and would cost the average property owner no more than $10, Heinekey estimated.

"And it isn't spread over a number of years. It's a one-shot deal," he said.

The 1977 levy if approved would not only pay for the land but leave some funds for improving it.

"On the long run, we hope to have five tennis courts and, if people want it, we could eventually have a swimming pool or an ice arena on the property," the regional director said.

Voting on the referendum Saturday will be from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the school board offices, Lower Ganges Road; the Central Community Hall and at Nan's Coffee Shop in Fulford Harbor.

He's King of All He Sees

King, born in Detroit, has shed his American raiment and moved into the damp woods of Beaufort County. He wears the garb of his African ancestors and rules over a 10-acre kingdom called Oyotunji, about 15 miles from the city of Beaufort.

To his 70 "subjects" and others, he is HRH His Royal Highness Oseijeman Adefunmi, ruler of Oyotunji, the only African village in North America, he says.

Adefunmi, 47, is also the former King Baba of New York, where he established and then abandoned a voodoo worshipping cult.

He founded Oyotunji about six years ago and appointed himself king.

He and his tribe worship 15 gods, whose appetite for blood is appeased through the sacrifice of animals. Drums, unseen, start beating when a visitor enters the village.

The sounds of pagan rituals are lost in the dense forest, where the killing of animals and other facets of a voodoo culture go virtually unnoticed. Those who inhabit Oyotunji are, as are many black Americans, descendants of the Yorubas, a people who live along the west coast of Africa, said Adefunmi.

"Having material things are not the highest status in this type of culture," where the measure of a man's wealth is in the number of his wives, said Adefunmi. He's got five himself.

Polygamy is contrary to U.S. law, but: "We don't marry under American law. We marry under our own Yoruba common law," said the king, who chain puffs a handcarved pipe wrapped in tiny beads.

Adefunmi says he was initiated into Orisha-Vudu, the worship of deified humans, in Cuba in 1959 after he became convinced that Africans could never be indoctrinated into Western traditions.

"You can't reorder a people's entire nature. We're not a European people and never will be able to be," he said.

The king is supported by what he called a "small tax" paid to him by his subjects and "a sales tax" on jewelry the women make and sell to tourists.

Anyone of black African descent can become a member of the tribe, and, upon doing so, sheds his American clothes, name and habits. Children are educated in the village, speaking both English and the Yoruban dialects.

A $450,000 FAREWELL

TORONTO — The board of Beth Tzedec synagogue has reached an out-of-court settlement totalling $450,000 in a dispute with Stuart Rosenberg, former rabbi of the congregation, according to The Star.

Quoting an unidentified member of the board, the newspaper says the settlement must be ratified at a special congregational meeting next Sunday.

The settlement is said to includes an immediate cash payment of $125,000 to Rosenberg from the synagogue and another $100,000 from the synagogue's insurance.

Another $225,000 is to be paid to the former rabbi in 12 annual installments.

In return, Rosenberg is to give up his synagogue-owned home and forfeit the right to be named rabbi emeritus as well as all other rights of congregation membership.

The settlement, the paper says, came just days before the rabbi's $2.5-million suit against Beth Tzedec and counter-claims against him were to come before the Supreme Court of Ontario.

The dispute, which began in 1973, arose from a decision by the Beth Tzedec board to fire the rabbi from his $50,000-a-year job.

Squeaky Didn't Like Show . . .

SAN DIEGO — Lynette Fromme didn't like the recent television drama about the Manson Family because it did not portray Charles Manson as a genius.

Fromme, sentenced to life for pointing a pistol at President Ford, telephoned a wire service Tuesday to protest the program, Helter Skelter, which she saw on a prison television set. "It made me angry because the portrayal of Manson was ludicrous and contemptible to me," she said. "It made a genius look like a contemptuous (sic) idiot."

LOS ANGELES — Henry Fonda is recovering slowly from surgery, a spokesman for the actor said Tuesday, indicating release from the hospital has been postponed. Earlier reports said Fonda, 70, was to leave Cedars of Lebanon last week or early this week. No date now is set.

Fonda sits up a for a short period each day but is not allowed visitors other than his family. Surgeons removed a large tumor, described as non-cancerous, and a portion of Fonda's diaphragm March 17.

JACKSON, Miss. — Julie Nixon Eisenhower Tuesday cancelled her plans to address the Mississippi Economic Council's annual membership luncheon. Mrs. Eisenhower changed her plans because of what a spokesman at the Nixons' San Clemente, Calif., home called "intense emotional pressures" created by publication of The Final Days, a book describing the last days of her father's presidency.

HOLLYWOOD — Actor George Hamilton — who made headlines during the Johnson administration by dating, the late president's daughter — says he and his wife, Alana, will be divorced this week. Hamilton and the former model, married Oct. 19, 1971, have a 20-month-old son, Ashley. It was the first marriage for both. "Alana wants a career," Hamilton said. "And I want a home, family and a full time wife. There is no bitterness or hard feeling. It's just that we seek different lifestyles."

Man Vanishes, May Be Living Out Book Plot

LONDON — Police have launched an international search for a top British journalist who disappeared from his home five weeks ago, a police spokesman said. John Golding, 48, managing editor of The Daily Mail, was last seen in his car leaving his home on Saturday, Feb. 28.

Friends say he may have vanished to live out the plot of a novel he was writing about a man who suddenly disappears.

Refined Away to Nothing

Movie Review by Nora Hutchison

Isabelle Adjani, the star of Francois Truffaut's new film, The Story of Adele H., is a gloriously beautiful young woman. Her skin glows with golden tones and her eyes are a very dark blue. Age hasn't yet begun to shape her face. It's still unformed and open to impressions. Such a face must have been an irresistable temptation to Truffaut, who works best with young, malleable actors.

He has been quoted as saying that he waited six years to find someone to play Adele, the love-mad second daughter of Victor Hugo. Perhaps he waited too long. It's not that Isabelle Adjani isn't a capable actress, because she is. She has control and intelligence, and great reserves of emotion that are surprising in someone so young (she is only 20 or 21).

But Truffaut's movie lacks spirit and conviction. It seems as if too much time has been spent in working over the screenplay. All the vigorous, creative energy that must have powered the project in its early stages, and which we should have felt as an integral, cohesive force in the finished film, has been refined away to nothing. The result is a studious and rather incredible account of Adele's grand passion for an English lieutenant, which caused her mental collapse and eventual confinement in an insane asylum.

Truffaut, who is a romantic, is also enough of a realist to know that any "grand passion" is bound to be as comic as it is intense — for the lovers maybe, for the observers, certainly. Yet this movie is dying for lack of the gentle, comic invention that Truffaut can work best. The few moments of black humor are accidental relief in the restrained, pedantic screenplay.

The film begins in 1863 in Halifax, where Adele Hugo has arrived in pursuit of Lieutenant Pinson, with whom she has had a brief affair. Adele has fixed her mind on the lieutenant — he is the only man that will do. She knows that he is a gambler and a womanizer, that he doesn't love her in the slightest, but she commits herself to him with a relentless, self-destructive energy that has all the elements of burgeoning madness.

There is nothing that Adele won't do to stay in the lieutenant's sight. She pays his gambling debts, sends him a whore, fills his uniform pockets with love notes. Her life revolves around him. She follows him at night and, with a crooked smile on her face, spies on his love-making. She tracks him during the day while he is on manoeuvres, and confronts him with handfuls of money.

When she doesn't see the lieutenant, she writes about him — long, rambling pages of notes that fill her journals. Adele grows more distracted. Her nights are filled with agonizing dreams of death by drowning. Her days are spent in rooms cluttered with discarded clothing, and finished pages. Her eyes redden and swell, and glasses become necessary. She wanders the streets of Halifax in a bedraggled dress, her hair trailing to her waist.

When Pinson's regiment is transferred to Barbados, Adele follows. She stalks the streets of Bridgetown, oblivious to everything. She is so absorbed in defining for herself the purity of her love that she fails to recognize the man who inspired it. When Pinson confronts her in the streets, fearful that she is about to cause him more grief, she no longer knows the face. She looks indifferently at him, and then moves on. The grand passion has consumed her completely — the man is of no consequence now.

Truffaut's much heralded return to movie-making is a huge disappointment. The Story of Adele H. is his first movie in two years. After a spate of films — Bed and Board, Two English Girls, Such a Gorgeous Kid Like Me, and Day For Night, he announced that he needed time off to write and to read. I was hoping that he'd come back with a great assurance of his talent — his particular ability to express the richness of life with bold, generous movements. But, instead, Adele H. is constrained, crowded, artificial.

For this film to have succeeded, we would have needed to believe wholeheartedly in Adele, and in her acts of love, but the character is not convincing. Clearly, Truffaut was fascinated with Adele, but he was unable or unwilling to be objective about her. Although Adele Hugo was in her 30s when she broke with her father and crossed the Atlantic to pursue her illusions, Truffaut has transformed her into a creature of almost mystical dimensions — the passionate, errant child defying the world for love. This may have been, in part, Isabelle Adjani's influence — she's too young and far too beautiful to have played Adele any other way — but, in any case, the character has been romanticized out of all proportion. The Story of Adele H. is as much about Francois Truffaut's passion for Isabelle Admani's beauty as it about Adele Hugo's quest for love.

Calypso Rock for City

Original music encompassing ballads, rock, country and even some reggae — rock with a clypso beat — will be heard when Gary, Betty and Blue perform at Open Space Thursday at 8 p.m.

The group, formed last summer, is based in Edmonton.

As an ensemble they have played throughout the West — notably at Rohan's in Vancouver.

Also at Open Space this week — on Friday at 8 p.m. — there will be a combined workshop-performance by the Dionysos Greek Dancers.

The Vancouver-based group will demonstrate and teach some of the tavern dances seen in such films as Zorba the Greek and Never on Sunday. They will also feature traditional village folk dances from many areas of the Greek islands.

Choreographer and instructor of the group is Achilles Vasilopoulos, who before coming to Canada two years ago, was lead dancer in a folk ensemble that performed extensively in Athens.

For both events tickets will be on sale at the door half an hour before performance time.

Quebec Takes Over Olympic Village

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec government has taken over ownership of Montreal's Olympic Village, which will be home to 11,000 athletes during the Summer Games opening July 17.

Bringing down special legislation Tuesday in the Quebec national assembly, Finance Minister Raymond Garneau said the government had no other choice because negotiations broke down with Les Terrasses Zarolega Inc., builders of the 19-storey, twin-pyramid project.

Ownership passed immediately to the Olympic installations board, appointed by the government in November to take over responsibility from the City of Montreal for construction and financing of the 72,000-seat Olympic stadium and related facilities.

The new move means the Liberal government of Premier Robert Bourassa has taken under its wing all the major new construction at Olympic park and vicinity in east-end Montreal.

All predictions now point to a successful completion of facilities, but the deficit is estimated as high as $900 million.

While billed as a private-enterprise venture, the village was heavily financed by the Olympic organizing committee as costs rose to a government estimated $95 million from $33 million in December, 1974.

The committee—which will stage the Games after facilities are handed over by the installations board—shouldered an open-ended second mortgage on the village which officials said has climbed to about $65 million.

While the new bill requires three readings and royal assent before becoming law, observers said the Liberal majority in the national assembly assures passage. The takeover became effective as soon as the legislation was tabled Tuesday.

Mr. Garneau told reporters the immediate takeover was necessary to prevent Zarolega from undertaking further contractual obligations that might run counter to the objectives of the installations board.

But Andrew Gaty, one of four partners in the Zarolega consortium, called the legislation an "outrageous confiscation." He said in an interview he does not question the government's legal right to take over the project, but said the method deprived Zarolega of the court recourse normally open to companies and citizens.

Pierre Pinard, a specialist in expropriation law and adviser to Zarolega, said he knows of no precedent for the legislation.

The legislation makes no provision for ownership compensation, Mr. Pinard said. It provides that a three-member board—one member recommended by the installations board, one by Zarolega and a third by the first two—decide what management fees Zarolega should receive plus the consortium's original investment of $2 million.

FIRST HOT DAY of the season and people start horsing around, even in staid Oak Bay. Tough Budget For Ottawa

By PETER THOMSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said Tuesday his budget will be delivered sometime in the last two weeks of May, after Prime Ministerr Trudeau has met with provincial premiers to discuss oil prices.

Macdonald noted the prime minister has invited premiers to meet May 5 and 6.

His comment about the budget came after he was asked if it would take into account the new pricing arrangement for oil, which promises to be a bitter battle.

The price established last year, $8 a barrel plus transportation, was to apply only until June 30, 1976.

Four provinces disrupted the one-price policy by applying a freeze on prices of certain petroleum products last summer and fall. They were Nova Scotia, Ontario, Manitoba and British Columbia.

Several provinces have already indicated they will fight against any increase this year.

However, the federal long-term policy is for annual increases moving the Canadian price closer to the world price.

An increase in the Canadian price of about $1.50 a barrel is expected simply because the government cannot afford to maintain the subsidy on imported oil while the Canadian price is $5 below world prices.

Nova Scotia and P.E.I., which are totally dependent on oil fuel to generate electricity, have been particularly strident in fighting any increase.

Economists are already predicting that, in addition to the oil price-subsidy issue, it will be a difficult budget for Macdonald.

Bank of Canada Governor Gerald Bouey has warned about excessive government borrowing, stating that it might damage the economic recovery.

Macdonald must decide whether to reduce federal borrowing next year by budgeting for a smaller cash requirement, as most provinces have done in their 1976 budgets.

However, with the economy recovering slowly from its 1975 recession, the finance minister cannot expect increased tax revenues to cover much of the deficit.

There will be strong pressure to increase taxes to increase revenues, a move which could also be interpreted as slowing the economic recovery even more.

Government officials have also mentioned the possibility of some form of credit controls to reduce consumer borrowing and perhaps lead to a lowering of interest rates.

A MAJORITY OF ONE FOR STU LEGGATT

OTTAWA (FP) — The term a majority of one took on new meaning in the Commons early today.

As a marathon debate over riding boundary changes dragged on, New Westminster MP Stuart Leggatt looked around shortly after 2 a.m. and found that he was the only member in the House with the exception of Speaker James Jerome. He finished his speech, moved adjournment and carried.

Technically, a minimum of 20 MPs of the 265 are required to be in the House for it to continue sitting but the rules are frequently easerd during overtime debates.

Peking Ousts Teng Again

Times News Services

PEKING — Chinese Communist Party vice-chairman Teng Hsaio-ping today was purged for the second time in 10 years.

His ouster from "all posts both inside and outside the party," announced by chairman Mao Tse-tung was a direct result of riots earlier this week at the Tien An Men square and came three years to the day after his restoration to favor.

Teng, who has not been seen in public since January had been under heavy attack from wall posters and party organizations for the past six weeks.

Teng, acting chief of the general staff of the Chinese armed forces had been widely expected to succeed Chou En-lai when the premier died last January.

But Hua Kuo-feng, the nation's top policeman was named acting premier in early February, and the new attacks on Teng began.

Hua was officially named premier today. He also was elected as a party vice-chairman, replacing Teng.

The action against Teng was swift, coming only two days after riots by elements believed to be supporting him.

However, the political bureau, now composed of only 21 members, is empowered to act on behalf of the central committee.

The swiftness of the action is regarded as an indication of the serious concern among Mao and the other leaders over Monday's riots.

During those riots, mobs set fire to at least three vehicles and a building in the square while protesting against the removal of wreaths paying tribute to Chou.

Some very basic issues are involved.

Many other high level leaders have been closely associated with some of the policies that Teng was accused to pushing at the expense of Mao's key policy line.

Primary Split

Times News Services

Jimmy Carter and Henry Jackson gained the victories, but in the end, the divided Democratic verdicts of the Wisconsin and New York presidential primary elections may prove a boon to the man who wasn't there — Hubert Humphrey.

President Ford won his sixth Republican primary, winning easily over challenger Ronald Reagan in Wisconsin.

There was no Republican primary as such in New York.

The drama was packed into the Wisconsin Democratic contest, a race that turned around early today and went to Carter as the final votes were counted, hours after Representative Morris Udall — favorite of the liberal wing of the party — staged a premature victory celebration.

George Wallace, who finished second in Wisconsin four years ago, came in a poor third.

Jackson's strong support from organized labor could do no better than bring him in fourth.

Both results point to another three-way race in the next big Democratic test, in Pennsylvania on April 27.

New Suits Won't Make Jobs—Social Worker

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm is trying to blame the unemployment situation on the unemployed, Victoria community action group representatives charged today.

New grooming regulations for employable welfare recipients are yet another indication of the new "get tough, hard-line approach that Vander Zalm is trying to push down everyone's throats," said Jamie Kelley, who works with the Community Action Group as a job-finder.

Kelley said it opens the door for discrimination against people with long hair, simply because their dress and grooming habits are different from the norm.

Kelley said the new regulations will "be used all the time" so people from the youthful sub-culture won't get welfare.

But he said two other regulations included in Vander Zalm's new policies are also dangerous.

A new regulation limits to two weeks the amount of social assistance for someone who quits or gets fired and is waiting up to nine weeks for Unemployment Insurance benefits.

Another regulation stipulates that hardship cases — those people who have been refused welfare — will no longer be eligible for assistance for shelter.

In one case, said, Kelley people will be locked into unacceptable jobs because they can't afford the waiting period for UIC and in the other case hardship cases will

Services For Hughes

HOUSTON (TNS) — Howard Hughes was buried today in private sunrise services attended by 16 mourners alongside his mother and father.

"We brought nothing into this world. It is certain we can take nothing out," Dean Robert Gibson said.

The plot is located on a tree-shaded knoll flanked by a canebreak. Hughes' grave faces east and the sun was just rising and breaking through overcast skies as the services commenced.

Local Gov't Borrowing Soars to New Heights

OTTAWA (CP) — Total borrowing by government, companies excepting banks and other financial businesses, and by individuals rose by $1.75 billion during 1975 to $29.5 billion, the Bank of Canad's march reveiew, released Tuesday, says.

The increase in borrowing over 1974 was due mostly to a surge in provincial and municipal government borrowing. Federal borrowing was about the same level as a year earlier while private companies borrowed less.

Bank of Canada governor Gerald Bouey already has warned in the central bank's 1975 annual report that excessive government borrowing might theaten a continuing economic recovery.

The March review points to a growing volume of government borrowing as a percentage of gross national expenditure — GNE — a measure of the value of all goods and services produced in the economy.

"Borrowing by all levels of government in total increased from just over $3 billion in 1973 to more than $8.5 billion in 1974 and to $12 billion in 1975, boosting the ratio of government borrowing to GNE from about three per cent in 1973 to just over eight per cent in 1975," the review notes.

The federal government's financing requirements for domestic transactions tripled from 1974 to $6 billion last year. About $500 million in Canadian dollars was received from foreign exchange transactions, leaving federal cash requirements at $5.5 billion.

The Federal government's total debt grew by $4 billion, compared with $4.2 billion in 1974.

Provincial and municipal borrowing jumped to $8.1 billion in 1975 from $4.5 billion in 1974, the review says. This occurred because of continued rapid growth in their own enterprises and a substantial widening in the deficits of some provincial governments, the Bank of Canada says.

Most of the increase in municipal and provincial borrowing was in the form of long-term bonds, including about $3.5 billion of bond issues placed abroad.

Private borrowing decreased by about $1.5 billion from a year earlier to $17.5 billion last year. All of the decline was accounted for by reduced borrowing by businesses. Personal borrowing rose.

The lower borrowing by business reflected both a slower growth in plant and equipment investment and a drawing down of inventories.

Mortgage borrowing continued to be strong, and as housing starts picked up during 1975. Residential mortgage loan approvals grew by 50 per cent over 1974.

$4,000 to Free Innocent Man

DELTA (CP) — A 58-year-old man being held in a Mexican jail because of a bank error over a cheque he had written says that he can buy this freedom for $4,000.

Victor Fisher, of this municipality, has been in jail in Manzanillo, Mexico, since Jan. 7 when authorities arrested him after a $500 cheque he wrote in Mexico was returned marked non-sufficient funds.

The cheque was written on a Royal Bank account but Mexican banking officials sent it by mistake to a branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, which sent the cheque back to Mexico.

After Fisher was arrested, his branch of the Royal Bank confirmed that the cheque was good, and the bank's statement was signed and notarized by Mexican authorities in Vancouver and sent to a court hearing the case.

Fisher was then cleared in Mexican courts of any wrongdoing in connection with the cheque, but a release order has been unexplainably held up.

Mrs. Fisher said Tuesday that she received word from her sister-in-law, Mrs. John Honeyman, who had spoken to an unidentified Mexican that, 'Vic wanted us to send someone down with $4,000."

"Vic figures the only way to get out of jail is to pay his way out," she added.

MP John Reynolds (PC—Burnaby-Richmond-Delta) asked External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen about Fisher's plight on Monday, and MacEachen replied in the Commons that there were "no abnormal delays" in the Mexican justice system.

Reynolds said in an interview from Ottawa that the Canadian government should publicize the fact that foreigners are not allowed bail even for relatively minor charges. "It's getting to be pretty treacherous to visit Mexico," he said. "The facts are that in this case it was a clerical error, and we've authenticated that."

CIVIL RIGHTS GROUPS ALERTED

Judge Criticizes the Law

People concerned with civil liberties should look at sections of the Combines Investigation Act "with something of a jaundiced eye," Judge Montague Drake said in granting a 43-year-old salesman an absolute discharge on a false advertising charge.

The imposition by Parliament of strict accountability "is an exercise of state power which is not really to be commended. However, it is there. Parliament has legislated it this way and that is why I was obliged to convict.

Salesman Glen Edward Clarke, 43, of 1331 Vining, was found guilty of advertising the Ball-Matic Air Injector as a device which placed in the carburetor of a car would increase performance. Judge Drake said the device was "inherently incapable" of doing what the advertising claimed it would.

Defence lawyer Mike Hutchison said his client had trusted information supplied by the company as the basis for the advertising claims.

Judge Drake said he would not have convicted Clarke "if it had been incumbent upon the Crown to prove the existence of the mental element necessary to make it a normal criminal offence, that is, some sense of wrongdoing on the part of Mr. Clarke.

"There was, indeed, evidence that his representations were based upon information which I think it was quite reasonable for him to regard as sound. In these circumstances, as has been held before in other cases dealing with statutory offences, practical justice is reflected in the disposition rather than the verdict that the court arrives at.

"I find this to be a proper case, where Mr. Clarke based his actions upon information largely supplied by others and which he had reason to believe was reasonably correct, to be a case where a discharge would be proper.

"I can't see any point in imposing conditions. In this case there will be an unconditional discharge."

Forces Base To Be Given Big Facelift

New buildings will be constructed, others modernized and new jetties built in a 10-year program expected to start this year at CFB Esquimalt.

Lt.-Col. W. P. Pollard, base engineering officer, says the plan is in its final stages and, while declining to put a price tag on it, he conceded the program will be "multi-million dollar project."

"The base development plan is to correct a lot of problems we know we have at the base," he added.

Pollard expects the first project will be an extension to the dockyard firehall. Another high priority is the construction of a new construction engineering building.

"There will also be a new hospital, we hope," he said. "At the moment we are trying to determine what (hospital) services the armed forces should be giving."

Other new buildings planned are ship engineering and vehicle maintenance shops, as well as a new ship repair facility.

Pollard said some additional jetties will be built and others relocated in an effort to get better efficiency.

In addition, the base's power distribution system will be updated.

Pollard says bases across the country either have similar programs ready to start or are preparing programs to update base facilities.

The building program was welcomed by Bill Hitchin, regional vice-president of the Union of National Defence Employees. The UNDE has 1,500 members employed on the base.

Earlier this week in Ottawa, UNDE national president Jack Power, while agreeing that armed forces personnel are doing their best to keep bases operational, said money is desperately needed to make them safe and completely functional.

Hitchin said improving armed forces facilities is long overdue. He said neglect of them is partially due to the fact that most facilities are not in view of the general public.

"When you look at customs, post office and public works buildings and compare them with armed forces bases, it just knocks your eyes out . . . the difference," he said.

Hitchin said some of the buildings still being used at Work Point Barracks should have been torn down long ago.

"They are temporary Second World War buildings, virtually thrown up for the duration," he said, "They (the authorities) do their best to keep the outsides looking neat and painted white and green but DND (department of national defence) buildings are, as a rule, shabby and in need of work inside."

Hitchin said several of the Work Point buildings still have to rely on space heaters.

"Space heaters, where else do you find them," he asked. "It's been on the agenda for four or five years to put furnaces in but the money's not been forthcoming."

Pollard said if such buildings are to be retained within the 10-year program they, too, will be improved.

Government employees strive for that healthy feeling of fitness

Apologies to Tennyson, of course, but right now, as daffodils burst forth and the sun gets a little warmer each day, provincial health department officials are hoping that physical conditioning will be foremost in the minds of government employees.

And they're hoping that not just young men's fancies will be turned in this direction but young women's, too, and the not-so-young and not-so-svelte of both sexes as well.

Obviously believing in the maxim that if you're active you feel better (thus reducing absenteeism and improving both morale and productivity), the department's occupational health branch is doing as much as it can to see that employees swing into spring with a little more oomph this year.

At 539 Superior Street, an old house, provided by the Public Service Commission and renovated by the department of public works, was opened three months ago as a Physical Activity Centre.

It boasts an ideal location right behind the Legislative Buildings and only a block and-a-half from Beacon Hill Park; shower and change area; two dynatrons (indoor running machines) plus a wide variety of indoor exercise bicycles; a carpeted exercise area; and pleasant background music to relax and soothe you.

It is, quips employee fitness director Gord Stewart, "the only fitness centre around that's got stained glass windows!"

The centre is open weekdays from 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. and government employees can either take advantage of any of the several group sessions offered or go over and do their own thing.

There are "Morning Madness" sessions for those crazy enough to want to limber up before settling in behind their desks, mid-day sessions during the staggered lunchtimes between 11:30 a.m. and 2 p.m. and after-work sessions starting from about 3 p.m.

On the wall are three huge charts showing the various positions for warmup exercises which are designed to be a progressive routine in three stages lasting 10 weeks. There is always an instructor (Gord has 10 part-time helpers) at the centre to make sure they are exercising properly.

"It's crucial that they learn the proper technique or it will not be beneficial," explains

Stewart. "And it could even be dangerous."

"We suggest they try to work out for 30 minutes three times a week," he says. "It's good if they do the warmup exercises for 15 minutes and then do indoor cycling or walking and jogging for 15 minutes."

"It's really a lifestyle change we're trying to achieve," he explains, adding that also provided are lectures and seminars on diet and nutrition given by Elspeth Charsley.

Government employees can get involved in "Yogaerobics" — a total fitness package combining the physical aspects of yoga with a gradual walk-jog-run endurance program — and in such recreational clubs as hiking, orienteering, cycling, water polo and synchronized swimming.

The 27-year-old Stewart, who got his master's degree in physical education last year at Simon Fraser University, doesn't think the government employees here are any less-fit than employees anywhere in Canada.

"But our health department is very forward thinking," he adds. "It's the only government that is doing anything like this on such a scale."

And yet, despite attempts so far to induce provincial employees to think fitness, he admits the centre is not being used as much as it could be.

So far, about 300 employees are involved in some kind of training program. But of these only about 150 have been working out at the centre.

For those who feel they work a little too far away from the centre, the staff is even prepared to send along an instructor to a group of employees anywhere.

"We are doing this now with staff at both the Victoria Mental Health Centre and Boor bike forever," says Stewart. "And these two groups have by far our best attendance records."

"You know, we're not suggesting that someone come in here and ride an indoor bike forever," laughs Gord. "We would like to see them learn the proper concepts of exercising and then they might look around and find something in the community where they live to carry on with."

"We're trying to convince people that being physically active is fun and beneficial . . . we want to get them started on their way."

Building, Car Lost In Fire At Mine

Fire destroyed a car and empty building at the Sunro mine near Jordan River Tuesday at noon while an inspection of the mine's upper level was being made.

Sooke RCMP said a watchman, a government mine inspector and a representative of Cominco were away from the mine buildings about 90 minutes and when they returned the wooden structure housing a laboratory, two offices and first aid room was engulfed by flames.

There was no indication of arson, but a survey of the blaze may be made by the provincial fire marshal's office.

Police estimated total loss at $18,000 including $5,000 for the new car, $10,000 for contents of the building and $3,000 for the frame building.

The mine has been closed 15 months awaiting improvement in the copper market or an easing of mine royalties in B.C.

Watchman Brian de Yaeger was taking mine inspector W. C. Robinson, of Nanaimo, and K. V. F. Meyer, of Trail, to examine part of the operation, police said.

de Yaeger's wife, who was living a short distance away from the mine, was the last to leave the building where she had used the telephone before locking the door and going home. Police said she was a non-smoker and there was no sign of any fire when she put down the phone and tidied up the office before leaving.

It was about noon when the three men returned to find the fire well under way and the building beyond saving.

Police thought electrical wiring may have been cause of the blaze, but it was also noted the laboratory may have contained some unstable chemicals which could have ignited spontaneously.

WALKER

The B.C. cabinet is ignoring Premier Bill Bennett's pre-election promise that the provincial government would not interfere with the running of Crown corporations, a Canadian Merchant Service Guild spokesman said today.

He said the cabinet is taking action that could scuttle the Princess Marguerite.

Assistant secretary-treasurer Capt. Maury Sjoquist said his union and the two others which negotiated a first contract with the B.C. Steamship Co. (formed by the former NDP government to operate the Princess Marguerite as a Crown corporation) have been informed that the cabinet has thrown out the contract ratified between the company and the unions in February.

The other unions involved are the Seafarers International Union and the Brotherhood of Railway, Airline and Steamship Clerks.

"We reached a collective agreement in February and we have waited 1½ months," Sjoquist said. "We were told by (B.C. Steamship Co.) manager Bob McHaffie on Friday that the agreement has been squelched by the cabinet."

Since coming to power, Sjoquist said the Socreds have "loaded the board of B.C. Steamships Co. with cabinet ministers" — Transport Minister Jack Davis, Deputy Premier Grace McCarthy, Attorney-General Garde Gardom and Economic Development Minister Donald Phillips.

In spite of their numbers, Sjoquist said, the company directors referred the contract ratification to cabinet because "it's too hot a potato for them to handle."

The Crown corporation comes under the jurisdiction of the federal government's conciliation department and Sjoquist said a letter has gone to that department today, requesting the help of a conciliation officer.

The collective agreement calls for wage parity of Princess Marguerite personnel with appropriate jobs in the B.C. Ferries fleet.

Davis said Friday he was rejecting the collective agreement because wage increases are not within the federal anti-inflation guidelines.

Sjoquist said Davis has no justification for this and because the unions involved had no increases last year, agreeing to stay within the guide-lines set by their agreement with CP Rail, which operated the vessel prior to it being bought by the government.

"The company, while it had a few financial problems, agreed there should be parity," Sjoquist said. "The ship's officers (of the Marguerite) have the same responsibilities and require the same certification as those in the B.C. Ferries service."

"That ship will likely not sail this spring," he added. "Some of our own people are most upset and feel they should be looking for other jobs.

COURTHOUSE HOMECOMING POSSIBLE IN THE FALL

Relief may be in sight before the end of this year for the over-crowded superior courts in Victoria temporarily housed in the former St. Ann's Academy girls' school.

Dr. J. J. Gow, president of the Victoria Bar Association, said Tuesday some of the courts may be able to return to the Burdett Street courthouse in the fall.

"The best information we have is that providing the present rate of construction is not interfered with, by act of God or a strike in the construction industry, it is just possible that some of the courts may be able to return to the courthouse in or about the month of October," he said.

County and Supreme Courts were shifted to St. Ann's last summer when work crews moved into the courthouse to add two floors. The Court of Appeal sittings in Victoria were moved to Vancouver.

What will be done with the two new floors is "still very nebulous," he said, but there is a likelihood the law library will be moved from the main floor to one of the new floors.

The provincial government, it had been thought, would use the new floors for extra courtrooms but it was learned after construction started that the new space would be used for general offices.

The province has also had plans to shift provincial courts from Fisgard Street into the Burdett Street courthouse by remodelling the main and lower main floors.

Speaking of provincial courts, Gow said "all that can be said is that there is every likelihood additional courtrooms will be constructed on the main floor only for the time being and if they are, some of these courtrooms may be made available for use of some of the provincial courts."

Summer Job Centre Opens for Students

Summer employment opportunities for students in the Greater Victoria area will again be co-ordinated by a special Canada Manpower Centre this year, Manpower manager Stan Purdy announced today.

The student centre at 546 Yates Street opened for business Monday and will be in operation weekdays from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. providing service to job-seeking students and potential employers.

Officer in charge of the centre is Anne Walker, a graduate of the University of Victoria, who will be assisted throughout the summer by five trained student counsellors.

Purdy said Mrs. Walker will contact employers to discuss the services provided at the centre, and to inquire about their summer staffing needs.

Mrs. Walker said she expects this year's total registration to exceed the 1975 total of 40,000, and already there have been more than 500 applications for jobs.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. What was the Whiskey Ring? It sounds interesting. J.L.

A. Very interesting in the 1870s. In fact, scandalous. The Whiskey Ring was an association of whiskey manufacturers and high U.S. government officials who conspired to cheat the government of taxes imposed on the distillers. It was one of the great political scandals of the Ulysses's S. Grant administration.

Quebec Takes Over Olympic Village

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec government has taken over ownership of Montreal's Olympic Village, which will be home to 11,000 athletes during the Summer Games opening July 17.

Bringing down special legislation Tuesday in the Quebec national assembly, Finance Minister Raymond Garneau said the government had no other choice because negotiations broke down with Les Terrasses Zarolega Inc., builders of the 19-storey, twin-pyramid project.

Ownership passed immediately to the Olympic installations board, appointed by the government in November to take over responsibility from the City of Montreal for construction and financing of the 72,000-seat Olympic stadium and related facilities.

The new move means the Liberal government of Premier Robert Bourassa has taken under its wing all the major new construction at Olympic park and vicinity in east-end Montreal.

All predictions now point to a successful completion of facilities, but the deficit is estimated as high as $800 million.

While billed as a private-enterprise venture, the village was heavily financed by the Olympic organizing committee as costs rose to a government estimated $95 million from $33 million in December, 1974.

FIRST HOT DAY of the season and people start horsing around, even in staid Oak Bay. Folks sitting down to supper Tuesday on Musgrave Street were taken aback by vision of Elizabeth Curnow, 1619 Hampshire, riding past their windows astride grey gelding Tango. Camera caught them in five-way intersection at Estevan shopping centre, heading for the sunset. (Greg Kent photo)

Tough Budget For Ottawa

By PETER THOMSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said Tuesday his budget will be delivered sometime in the last two weeks of May, after Prime Minister Trudeau has met with provincial premiers to discuss oil prices.

Macdonald noted the prime minister has invited premiers to meet May 5 and 6.

His comment about the budget came after he was asked if it would take into account the new pricing arrangement for oil, which promises to be a bitter battle.

The price established last year, $8 a barrel plus transportation, was to apply only until June 30, 1976.

Four provinces disrupted the one-price policy by applying a freeze on prices of certain petroleum products last summer and fall. They were Nova Scotia, Ontario, Manitoba and British Columbia.

Several provinces have already indicated they will fight against any increase this year.

However, the federal long-term policy is for annual increases moving the Canadian price closer to the world price.

An increase in the Canadian price of about $1.50 a barrel is expected simply because the government cannot afford to maintain the subsidy on imported oil while the Canadian price is $5 below world prices.

Nova Scotia and P.E.I., which are totally dependent on oil fuel to generate electricity, have been particularly strident in fighting any increase.

Economists are already predicting that, in addition to the oil price-subsidy issue, it will be a difficult budget for Macdonald.

Bank of Canada Governor Gerald Bouey has warned about excessive government borrowing, stating that it might damage the economic recovery.

Macdonald must decide whether to reduce federal borrowing next year by budgeting for a smaller cash requirement, as most provinces have done in their 1976 budgets.

However, with the economy recovering slowly from its 1975 recession, the finance minister cannot expect increased tax revenues to cover much of the deficit.

There will be strong pressure to increase taxes to increase revenues, a move which could also be interpreted as slowing the economic recovery even more.

Government officials have also mentioned the possibility of some form of credit controls to reduce consumer borrowing and perhaps lead to a lowering of interest rates.

A MAJORITY OF ONE FOR STU LEGGATT

OTTAWA (CP) — The term a majority of one took on new meaning in the Commons early today.

As a marathon debate over riding boundary changes dragged on, New Westminster MP Stuart Leggatt looked around shortly after 2 a.m. and found that he was the only member in the House with the exception of Speaker James Jerome. He finished his speech, moved adjournment and carried.

Technically, a minimum of 20 MPs of the 265 are required to be in the House for it to continue sitting but the rules are frequently eased during overtime debates.

Peking Ousts Teng Again

Times News Services

PEKING — Chinese Communist Party vice-chairman Teng Hsaio-ping today was purged for the second time in 10 years.

His ouster from "all posts both inside and outside the party," announced by chairman Mao Tse-tung, was a direct result of riots earlier this week at the Tien An Men square and came three years to the day after his restoration to favor.

Teng, who has not been seen in public since January, had been under heavy attack from wall posters and party organizations for the past six weeks.

Teng, acting chief of the general staff of the Chinese armed forces, had been widely expected to succeed Chou En-lai when the premier died last January.

But Hua Kuo-feng, the nation's top policeman, was named acting premier in early February, and the new attacks on Teng began.

Hua was officially named premier today. He also was elected as a party vice-chairman, replacing Teng.

The action against Teng was swift, coming only two days after riots by elements believed to be supporting him.

However, the political bureau, now composed of only 21 members, is empowered to act on behalf of the central committee.

The swiftness of the action is regarded as an indication of the serious concern among Mao and the other leaders over Monday's riots.

During those riots, mobs set fire to at least three vehicles and a building in the square while protesting against the removal of wreaths paying tribute to Chou.

Some very basic issues are involved.

Many other high level leaders have been closely associated with some of the policies that Teng was accused of pushing at the expense of Mao's key policy line.

Primary Split

Times News Services

Jimmy Carter and Henry Jackson gained the victories, but in the end, the divided Democratic verdicts of the Wisconsin and New York presidential primary elections may prove a boon to the man who wasn't there — Hubert Humphrey.

President Ford won his sixth Republican primary, winning easily over challenger Ronald Reagan in Wisconsin.

There was no Republican primary as such in New York.

The drama was packed into the Wisconsin Democratic contest, a race that turned around early today and went to Carter as the final votes were counted, hours after Representative Morris Udall — favorite of the liberal wing of the party — staged a premature victory celebration.

George Wallace, who finished second in Wisconsin four years ago, came in a poor third.

Jackson's strong support from organized labor could do no better than bring him in fourth.

Both results point to another three-way race in the next big Democratic test, in Pennsylvania on April 27.

5 CITY FIRMS RAIDED

Five business premises in the Greater Victoria area were searched by police Monday during an RCMP investigation into possible fraud involving a Local Initiatives Program (LIP) grant obtained by a Victoria businessman.

RCMP Sgt. L. F. Hollotuk said today the police departments of Victoria, Saanich and Oak Bay co-operated in conducting the searches.

The investigation continues and no charges have been laid, Hollotuk said.

He would not disclose the amount of the grant received by the businessman.

City Bank Held Up

City police were searching for a man in his 30s after a hold-up at the Royal Bank of Canada branch at Cook and Oxford at 1:45 this afternoon.

The man escaped on foot down Cook after the incident, carrying a brown paper bag containing an unknown amount of money. Indications were he was armed.

Talks Continue

VANCOUVER (CP) — Discussions involving the Teamsters' Union, Transport Labor Relations and provincial mediator Ken Albertini are to continue today. None of the parties would comment on talks held Tuesday.

New Suits Won't Make Work—Job Finder

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm is trying to blame the unemployment situation on the unemployed, Victoria community action group representatives charged today.

New grooming regulations for employable welfare recipients are yet another indication of the new "get tough, hard-line approach that Vander Zalm is trying to push down everyone's throats," said Jamie Kelley, who works with the Community Action Group as a job-finder.

Kelley said it opens the door for discrimination against people with long hair, simply because their dress and grooming habits are different from the norm.

Kelley said the new regulations will "be used all the time" so people from the youthful sub-culture won't get welfare.

But he said two other regulations included in Vander Zalm's new policies are also dangerous.

A new regulation limits to two weeks the amount of social assistance for someone who quits or gets fired and is waiting up to nine weeks for unemployment insurance benefits.

Another regulation stipulates that hardship cases — those people who have been refused welfare — will no longer be eligible for assistance for shelter.

In one case, said, Kelley people will be locked into unacceptable jobs because they can't afford the waiting period for UIC and in the other case hardship cases will

Services For Hughes

HOUSTON (TNS) — Howard Hughes was buried beside his mother and father today in private sunrise services attended by 16 mourners.

"We brought nothing into this world. It is certain we can take nothing out," Dean Robert Gibson said.

The plot is located on a tree-shaded knoll flanked by a canebreak. Hughes' grave faces east and the sun was just rising and breaking through overcast skies as the services commenced.

Local Gov't Borrowing Soars to New Heights

OTTAWA (CP) — Total borrowing by government, companies excepting banks and other financial businesses, and by individuals rose by $1.75 billion during 1975 to $29.5 billion, the Bank of Canada's March review, released Tuesday, says.

The increase in borrowing over 1974 was due mostly to a surge in provincial and municipal government borrowing. Federal borrowing was about the same level as a year earlier while private companies borrowed less.

Bank of Canada governor Gerald Bouey already has warned in the central bank's 1975 annual report that excessive government borrowing might threaten a continuing economic recovery.

The March review points to a growing volume of government borrowing as a percentage of gross national expenditure — GNE — a measure of the value of all goods and services produced in the economy.

"Borrowing by all levels of government in total increased from just over $3 billion in 1973 to more than $8.5 billion in 1974 and to $12 billion in 1975, boosting the ratio of government borrowing to GNE from about three per cent in 1973 to just over eight per cent in 1975," the review notes.

The federal government's financing requirements for domestic transactions tripled from 1974 to $6 billion last year. About $500 million in Canadian dollars was received from foreign exchange transactions, leaving federal cash requirements at $5.5 billion.

The federal government's total debt grew by $4 billion, compared with $4.2 billion in 1974.

Provincial and municipal borrowing jumped to $8.1 billion in 1975 from $4.5 billion in 1974, the review says. This occurred because of continued rapid growth in their own enterprises and a substantial widening in the deficits of some provincial governments, the Bank of Canada says.

Most of the increase in municipal and provincial borrowing was in the form of long-term bonds, including about $3.5 billion of bond issues placed abroad.

Private borrowing decreased by about $1.5 billion from a year earlier to $17.5 billion last year. All of the decline was accounted for by reduced borrowing by businesses. Personal borrowing rose.

The lower borrowing by business reflected both a slower growth in plant and equipment investment and a drawing down of inventories.

Mortgage borrowing continued to be strong, and as housing starts picked up during 1975 residential mortgage loan approvals grew by 50 per cent over 1974.

$4,000 to Free Innocent Man

DELTA (CP) — A 58-year-old man being held in a Mexican jail because of a bank error over a cheque he had written says that he can buy his freedom for $4,000.

Victor Fisher, of this municipality, has been in jail in Manzanillo, Mexico, since Jan. 7 when authorities arrested him after a $500 cheque he wrote in Mexico was returned marked non-sufficient funds.

The cheque was written on a Royal Bank account but Mexican banking officials sent it by mistake to a branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, which sent the cheque back to Mexico.

After Fisher was arrested, his branch of the Royal Bank confirmed that the cheque was good, and the bank's statement was signed and notarized by Mexican authorities in Vancouver and sent to a court hearing the case.

Fisher was then cleared in Mexican courts of any wrongdoing in connection with the cheque, but a release order has been unexplainably held up.

Mrs. Fisher said Tuesday that she received word from her sister-in-law, Mrs. John Honeyman, who had spoken to an unidentified Mexican that, 'Vic wanted us to send someone down with $4,000."

MP John Reynolds (PC—Burnaby-Richmond-Delta) asked External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen about Fisher's plight on Monday, and MacEachen replied in the Commons that there were "no abnormal delays" in the Mexican justice system.

Reynolds said in an interview from Ottawa that the Canadian government should publicize the fact that foreigners are not allowed bail even for relatively minor charges. "It's getting to be pretty treacherous to visit Mexico," he said. "The facts are that in this case it was a clerical error, and we've authenticated that."
